Phenomenology of Natural Science L. Hardy, Lester Embree, 2012-12-06 Contemporary philosophy seems a great swirling almost chaos. Every situation must seem so at the time, probably because philosophy itself resists structuration and because personal and political factors within as well as without the discipline must fade in order for the genuinely philosophical merits of performances to be assessed. Nevertheless, some remarks can still be made to situate the present volume. For example, at least half of philosophy on planet Earth is today pursued in North America, which is not to say that this portion is any less internally incoherent than the whole of which it thus becomes the largest part, and the present volume is North American. Incidentally, the recognition of culturally geographic traditions and tendencies nowise implies that striving for cross-cultural if not trans-cultural philosophical validity has failed or ceased. Rather, it merely recognizes a significant aspect relevant from the historical point of view. Epistemology, Aesthetics, Ethics, etc. Analytic Philosophy, Marxism, Existentialism, etc. Figure 1. There are two main ways in which philosophical developments are classified. One is in terms of tendencies, movements, and schools of thought, and the other is in terms of traditional sub-disciplines. When there is little contention among schools, the predominant way is in terms of sub-disciplines, such as aesthetics, ethics, politics, etc. Today, this mode of classification can be seen to intersect with that in terms of movements and tendencies, both of which are represented in the above chart.

The Universe as Communion Alexei Nesteruk, 2011-11-03 In this book, a new and distinctive approach to the science-religion debate emerges from a synthesis of the Eastern Orthodox Christian tradition with phenomenological thought. Developing ideas of Greek Patristics, the author treats faith with its sense of the Divine presence and knowledge of the universe as two modes of communion which constitute the human condition. The modern opposition between science and theology, which is historically paralleled with the Church's split between East and West, and monasticism and Christianity in the world, is treated as the split between two intentionalities of the overall human subjectivity. The human person as a centre of their reconciliation becomes the major theme of the dialogue between science and theology. It is argued that the reconciliation of science and theology is not simply an academic exercise; it requires an existential change, a change of mind (metanoia) which cannot be effected without ecclesial involvement. Then, the person who effectuates the mediation between science and theology is raised to the level of cosmic priesthood, while the mediation acquires the features of a cosmic Eucharist, in which all divisions and tensions in creation and humanity are removed. It is through this existential change, accompanied by phenomenological analysis, that scientific theories can be subjected to a certain vision through which the hidden ultimate goal (telos) of scientific research, as the explication of the human condition, shows its kinship to the saving telos advocated by Christian faith. The opposition between theology and science is thus being para-eucharistically overcome.

Continental Philosophy of Science Gary Gutting, 2008-04-15 Continental Philosophy of Science provides an expert guide to the major twentieth-century French and German philosophical thinking on science. A comprehensive introduction by the editor provides a unified interpretative survey of
