Alaska Claus-M. Naske,1987 History of the state of Alaska from early to contemporary times discussing its native peoples sale to the United States gold rush quest for statehood and oil boom The Courthouse and the Depot Wilber W. Caldwell,2001 Their songs insist that the arrival of the railroad and the appearance of the tiny depot often created such hope that it inspired the construction of the architectural extravaganzas that were the courthouses of the era In these buildings the distorted myth of the Old South collided head on with the equally deformed myth of the New South Roanoke, Virginia, 1882-1912 Rand Dotson,2007 It then describes how that venture initially paid off as the influx of thousands of people from the North and the surrounding Virginia countryside helped make Roanoke presumptuously christened the Magic City by New South proponents the state s third largest city by the turn of the century Rand Dotson recounts what life was like for Roanoke's wealthy elites working poor and African American inhabitants. He also explores the social conflicts that ultimately erupted as a result of well-intended reforms initiated by city leaders. Dotson illustrates how residents mediated the catastrophic Depression of 1893 and that year's infamous Roanoke Riot which exposed the facade masking the city's racial tensions, inadequate physical infrastructure and provincial mentality of the local populace. Dotson then details the subsequent attempts of business boosters and progressive reformers to attract the additional investments needed to put their city back on track.

The Rise of the Urban South Lawrence H. Larsen, 2021-12-14 Operating under an outmoded system of urban development and faced by the vicissitudes of the Civil War and Reconstruction, southerners in the nineteenth century built a network of cities that met the needs of their society. In this pioneering exploration of that intricate story, Lawrence H. Larsen shows that in the antebellum period, southern entrepreneurs built cities in layers to facilitate the movement of cotton. First came the colonial cities, followed by those of the piedmont, the New West, the Gulf Coast, and the interior. By the Civil War, cotton could move by a combination of road, rail, and river through a network of cities, for example from Jackson to Memphis to New Orleans to Europe. In the Gilded Age, building on past practices, the South continued to make urban gains. Men like Henry Grady of Atlanta and Henry Watterson of Louisville used broader regional objectives to promote their own cities. Grady successfully sold Atlanta as one of the most southern of cities, demographically as a city with a northern outlook. Watterson tied Louisville to national goals in railroad building. The New South movement did not succeed in bringing the region to parity with the rest of the nation, yet the South continued to rise along older lines. By 1900, far from being a failure in terms of the general course of American development, the South had created an urban system suited to its needs while avoiding the promotional frenzy that characterized the building of cities in the North. Based upon federal and local sources, this book will become the standard work on nineteenth-century southern urbanization, a subject too long unexplored.

Guide to the Library of Congress Classification Lois Mai Chan, Sheila S. Intner, Jean Weihs, 2016-09-26 Like earlier editions, this thoroughly updated sixth edition of the classic textbook provides readers with a basic understanding of the Library of Congress Classification system and its applications. The Library of Congress Classification system is used in academic, legal, medical, and research libraries throughout North America, as well as worldwide. Accordingly, catalogers and librarians in these settings all need to be able to use it. The established gold standard text for Library of Congress Classification, LCC, the sixth edition of Guide to the Library of Congress Classification updates and complements the classic textbook's coverage of cataloging in academic and research libraries. Clear and easy to understand, the text describes the reasoning behind assigning subject headings and subheadings, including use of tables, explains the principles, structure, and format of LCC details notation tables, assigning class numbers, and individual classes, and covers classification of special types of library materials. The last chapter of this perennially useful resource addresses the potential role of classification in libraries of the future Miz Suzie's Boy Herman Flora, 2005-09-15 Miz Suzie's Boy is a remarkable book about a Negro boy born into abject poverty during the Great Depression to a teenage mother. Hardships of the depression included shooting crows for meals and keeping hands down shoes together with string and newspaper. Negroes in the town of West Munden, a few miles south of Norfolk, cared deeply for each other. Poverty was pervasive and the old folks talked incessantly about becoming millionaires but children were unaware of the degree of how badly things really were. Together families banded together to combat blatant racism and rise above the negative impact of the Ku Klux Klan. His early home training fostered a love of God, Country, and Family. He was taught to work hard, practice thrift, speak honestly, and with integrity maintain his individuality and relentlessly pursue an education. Childhood was a happy time for Herman and he spent many hours playing with relatives, neighborhood children, and make-believe toys. Flora moved to an adjoining community, South Norfolk, when he was eleven and made new friends. He joined the Boy Scouts and strictly lived by the Scout Oath and its precepts. This later helped to keep him mentally awake and morally straight. Friendship, puppy love for a classmate, hastened his efforts to enter the U.S. Army as an under-aged youth with the hope of finding her in the Philippines. Flora entered the Army, trained at Aberdeen, Maryland, and cavorted with prostitutes and pimps whenever he was granted leave. He journeyed overseas on a troopship with fifteen hundred soldiers. The boredom and tedium of the voyage was downplayed by the laughter, witty banter, and frequent exchange of incredible lies. Arriving overseas, he started his first job as a latrine orderly. Flora found the Army reasonably challenging, thrived, and became Acting First Sergeant of a medical detachment within months. Frequent interactions and frank discussions with long-time career soldiers constantly reminded him of the need for a good education. He returned to Norfolk from the Army, finished his last year of high school, and enrolled at Howard University. College was demanding of his mind and time during the week, and only the weekends were available for frolicking, football, fraternities, and girls. Beautiful young ladies consumed every spare moment until he identified and pursued the one, a minister's daughter. Together they lovingly reared seven college-educated children. Herman pursued ownership of several businesses and finally decided to make his million dollars brokering real estate. He accepted an Executive Level position with the U.S. Department of Commerce, Office of Minority Business Enterprise (OMBE), where he patiently assisted national minority businesses with their growth and expansion. In a very poignant letter sent from Africa to his grandchildren and other grandchildren of the world, he reflected on several world problems, encouraged them to diligently educate and prepare themselves for the next century, and never lose sight of God, goals, and a good life.
