High Value Fermentation Products, Volume 1 Saurabh Saran,Vikash Babu,Asha Chaubey,2019-03-12 Green technologies are no longer the future of science but the present With more and more mature industries such as the process industries making large strides seemingly every single day and more consumers demanding products created from green technologies it is essential for any business in any industry to be familiar with the latest processes and technologies It is all part of a global effort to go greener and this is nowhere more apparent than in fermentation technology This book describes relevant aspects of industrial scale fermentation an expanding area of activity which already generates commercial values of over one third of a trillion US dollars annually and which will most likely radically change the way we produce chemicals in the long term future From biofuels and bulk amino acids to monoclonal antibodies and stem cells they all rely on mass suspension cultivation of cells in stirred bioreactors which is the most widely used and versatile way to produce Today a wide array of cells can be cultivated in this way and for most of them genetic engineering tools are also available Examples of products operating procedures engineering and design aspects economic drivers and cost and regulatory issues are addressed In addition there will be a discussion of how we got to where we are today and of the real world in industrial fermentation This chapter is exclusively dedicated to large scale production used in industrial settings

Guide to the Literature for the Industrial Microbiologist Peter Hahn,2012-12-06 By 1960 the scientific community began observing an ever increasing explosion in the literature embracing the many facets of industrial microbiology Many of the so called traditional areas were being replaced by more modern provocative channels of endeavor It was about this time that excellent review type annual publications such as Advances in Applied Microbiology Progress in Industrial Microbiology and Developments in Industrial Microbiology emerged reporting the exciting new work It was soon thereafter that the Division of Microbial Chemistry shed its probationary status to become a bona fide unit of the American Chemical Society A rash of new applied microbiological textbooks arrived on the scene The number of journals reporting the day to day scientific achievements also burgeoned Early in my industrial career I found it imperative to devise a workable key to the ever increasing volume of literature that was emerging This I compiled over the years on voluminous stacks of file cards which have in essence been reprinted here as my Guide to the Literature for the Industrial Microbiologist The Guide has indeed served me well and through it one can readily ascertain the state of the art of any of the many specialized subjects of industrial microbiology Logically one would first consult recent textbooks to obtain an overview of the subject being searched

Handbook of Breadmaking Technology C. A. Stear,2012-12-06 The author's aim in writing this book is to integrate currently available knowledge concerning the basic scientific and technological aspects of breadmaking processes with the diverse breadmaking methods used to manufacture bread in Europe and on the North

American continent today To date the main technological advances have been in process mechanization starting with oven development then dough processing or make up equipment followed by continuous and batch mixing techniques from the 1950s to the present time On the engineering side universal emphasis is now being placed on the application of high technology in the form of microprocessors computer controlled equipment and robotization the long term objective being computer integrated manufacture CIM with full automation within the large chain bakery groups in the capitalist countries and the state run collectives of Eastern Europe The application of these key technologies with biotechnology as yet only applied to a limited degree in food manufacture coupled with advances in biochemical and rheological understanding of dough as a biomass for breadmaking should provide us with more expertise and ability to control the processes with greater efficiency The application of fermentable substrates and industrial enzymes under strict kinetic control should contribute to improving the flavour characteristics of bread Current trends towards improving the nutritional contribution of bread to the daily diet are improving the competitive edge of bread as a basic food in the market place

Biochemistry of food proteins
B. J. F. Hudson, 2013-03-09 Developments in the understanding of food protein structure behaviour and applications continue apace Many of these have in the past decade been reported and evaluated in the series Developments in Food Proteins comprising seven volumes with a total of 55 chapters The time has now come to reassess many of the topics reviewed in that series and to add certain others However instead of assembling somewhat at random food protein topics from quite disparate fields in individual volumes we have decided to bring together homogeneous groups of topics each representing a specific sector of the subject Under the general theme of Progress in Food Proteins the first of these groups covers Biochemistry Readers will note that though six of the topics reviewed in this volume are new five of them have already featured in Developments in Food Proteins These last are in active research fields in which new developments have been of special significance In this sense therefore they are welcome updates
