Bioactive Food as Dietary Interventions for Cardiovascular Disease Ronald Ross Watson, Victor R Preedy, 2012-10-22 One major example of the synergy of bioactive foods and extracts is their role as an antioxidant and the related remediation of cardiovascular disease There is compelling evidence to suggest that oxidative stress is implicated in the physiology of several major cardiovascular diseases including heart failure and increased free radical formation and reduced antioxidant defences. Studies indicate bioactive foods reduce the incidence of these conditions suggestive of a potential cardioprotective role of antioxidant nutrients. Bioactive Food as Dietary Interventions for Cardiovascular Disease investigates the role of foods, herbs and novel extracts in moderating the pathology leading to cardiovascular disease. It reviews existing literature and presents new hypotheses and conclusions on the effects of different bioactive components of the diet. Addresses the most positive results from dietary interventions using bioactive foods to impact cardiovascular disease. Documents foods that can affect metabolic syndrome and other related conditions. Convenient, efficient and effective source that allows readers to identify potential uses of compounds or indicate those compounds whose use may be of little or no health benefit. Associated information can be used to understand other diseases that share common etiological pathways.

The Effects of Omega-3 Polyunsaturated Fatty Acids on Cardiac Rhythm: Antiarrhythmic, Proarrhythmic, Both or Neither? George E. Billman, The cardiovascular benefits of dietary omega 3 polyunsaturated fatty acids (n-3 PUFA) have been actively investigated for nearly 40 years. Beginning with the pioneering studies of Bang and Dyerberg, epidemiological data provide strong evidence for an inverse relationship between fatty fish consumption and cardiac mortality. In contrast to these observational studies, interventional studies using n-3 PUFAs for the secondary prevention of adverse cardiovascular events in patients with heart disease have yielded conflicting results. Some studies have reported reduced sudden cardiac death or mortality while other more recent studies have reported either no effect or an increase in adverse cardiac events. Nevertheless, the American Heart Association and the American College of Cardiology continue to recommend fish oils for the secondary prevention of coronary artery disease. Based in part upon these recommendations, consumer demand for n-3 PUFA products, both nutritional supplements and foods enriched with these lipids, has exploded. In the United States alone, it has been estimated that in 2004, 10% of the adult U.S. population were taking a fish oil supplement with annual sales growth of 40%. In fact, the sales of these products are projected to exceed 7 billion dollars by the end of 2011. www.marketresearch.com product reports. Despite the extensive marketing of fish oil products, a scientific consensus on the effects of n-3 PUFA on cardiac rhythm has yet to be reached. It is the purpose of this Research Topic to stimulate a discussion on the putative benefits of n-3 PUFAs on cardiac rhythm. Authors are invited to submit clinical, translational or experimental research articles, reviews and hypotheses that address the actions of n-3 PUFA, positive, negative or neutral, on cardiac rhythm and cardiac electrophysiology. Studies that evaluate the effects of n-3 PUFA on myocyte electrical properties, atrial fibrillation, ventricular fibrillation and heart rate variability are particularly welcome.
