Natural Selection And Tropical Nature:

Natural Selection and Tropical Nature Alfred Russel Wallace, 1891 Natural Selection and Tropical Nature Essays on Descriptive and Theoretical Biology Alfred Russel Wallace, 2016-05-25 This early work by Alfred Russel Wallace was originally published in 1895 and we are now republishing it with a brand new introductory biography Natural Selection and Tropical Nature Essays on Descriptive and Theoretical Biology is a collection of essays that detail Wallace's observations of various bird species and outlines some of his ideas relating to evolutionary theory Alfred Russel Wallace was born on 8th January 1823 in the village of Llanbadoc in Monmouthshire Wales Wallace was inspired by the travelling naturalists of the day and decided to begin his exploration career collecting specimens in the Amazon rainforest He explored the Rio Negro for four years making notes on the peoples and languages he encountered as well as the geography flora and fauna While travelling Wallace refined his thoughts about evolution and in 1858 he outlined his theory of natural selection in an article he sent to Charles Darwin Wallace made a huge contribution to the natural sciences and he will continue to be remembered as one of the key figures in the development of evolutionary theory Natural Selection and Tropical Nature; Alfred Russel Wallace, 2012-01 Unlike some other reproductions of classic texts 1 We have not used OCR Optical Character Recognition as this leads to bad quality books with introduced typos 2 In books where there are images such as portraits maps sketches etc We have endeavoured to keep the quality of these images so they represent accurately the original artefact Although occasionally there may be certain imperfections with these old texts we feel they deserve to be made available for future generations to enjoy Natural Selection and Tropical Nature Alfred Russel Wallace, Charles Hyde Smith, 2004

Natural Selection and Tropical Nature Alfred Russel Wallace, 2015-06-17 Excerpt from Natural Selection and Tropical Nature Essays on Descriptive and Theoretical Biology The present volume consists mainly of a reprint of two volumes of essays Contributions to the Theory of Natural Selection which appeared in 1870 with a second edition in 1871 and has now been many years out of print and Tropical Nature and Other Essays which appeared in 1878 In preparing a new edition of these works to appear as a single volume I have thought it advisable to omit two essays that on The Malayan Papilionid as being too technical for general readers and that on The Distribution of Animals as indicating Geographical Changes which contains nothing that is not more fully treated in my other works Another essay By Paths in the Domain of Biology has also been partly omitted one portion of it forming a short chapter on The Antiquity and Origin of Man while another portion has been incorporated in the chapter on The Colours of Animals and Sexual Selection More than compensating for these omissions are two new chapters The Antiquity of Man in North America and The Debt of Science to Darwin Many corrections and some important additions have been made to the text the chief of which are indicated in the table given below and to facilitate reference the two original works have separate headings and form Parts I and II of the present volume About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com

NATURAL SELECTION & TROPICAL N Alfred Russel Wallace, 1823-1913. Wallace, 2016-08-26. Tropical Nature, and Other Essays Alfred Russel Wallace, 1878. Writings on Evolution, 1843-1912: Natural selection and tropical nature Alfred Russel Wallace, 2004. Nature Versus Natural Selection Coe, 1895. Nature Versus Natural Selection Charles Clement Coe, 1895. A.L.A. Catalog, 1904. Tropical Nature and Other Essays Alfred Russel Wallace, It is difficult for an inhabitant of our temperate land to realize either the sudden and violent contrasts of the arctic seasons or the wonderful uniformity of the equatorial climate. The lengthening or the shortening days, the ever changing tints of spring summer and autumn succeeded by the leafless boughs of winter are constantly recurring phenomena which represent to us the established course of nature At the equator none of these changes occur there is a perpetual equinox and a perpetual summer and were it not for variations in the quantity of rain in the direction and strength of the winds and in the amount of sunshine accompanied by corresponding slight changes in the development of vegetable and animal life the monotony of nature would be extreme In the present chapter it is proposed to describe the chief peculiarities which distinguish the equatorial from the temperate climate and to explain the causes of the difference between them causes which are by no means of so simple a nature as are usually imagined The three great divisions of the earth the tropical the temperate and the frigid zones may be briefly defined as the regions of uniform of variable and of extreme physical conditions respectively They are primarily determined by the circumstance of the earth's axis not being perpendicular to the plane in which it moves round the sun whence it follows that during one half of its revolution the north pole and during the other half the south pole is turned at a considerable angle towards the source of light and heat This inclination of the axis on which the earth rotates is usually defined by the inclination of the equator to the plane of the orbit termed the obliquity of the ecliptic The amount of this obliquity is 23 degrees and this measures the extent on each side of the equator of what are called the tropics because within these limits the sun becomes vertical at noon twice a year and at the extreme limit once a year while beyond this distance it is never vertical It will be evident however from the nature of the case that the two lines which mark the limits of the geographical tropics will not define any abrupt change of climate or physical conditions such as characterise the tropical and temperate zones in their full development There will be a gradual transition from one to the other and in order to study them separately and contrast their special features we must only take into account the portion of each in which these are most fully exhibited For the temperate zone we may take all countries situated between 35 and 60 of latitude which in Europe will include every place between Christiania and Algiers the districts further south forming a transitional belt in which temperate and tropical features are combined In order to study the special features of tropical nature on the other hand it will be advisable to confine our attention mainly to that portion of the globe which extends for about twelve degrees on each side of the equator in which all the chief tropical phenomena dependent on astronomical causes are most fully manifested and which we may distinguish as the equatorial zone In the debateable ground between these two well contrasted belts local causes have a preponderating influence and it would not be difficult to point out localities within the temperate zone of our maps which exhibit all the chief characteristics of tropical nature to a greater degree than other localities which are as regards geographical position tropical

Colour, Art and Empire Natasha Eaton, 2013-10-28

Colour Art and Empire explores the entanglements of visual culture enchanted technologies waste revolution resistance and otherness The materiality of colour offers a critical and timely force field for approaching afresh debates on colonialism This book analyses the formation of colour and politics as qualitative overspill Colour can be viewed both as central and supplemental to early photography the totem alchemy tantra and mysticism From the eighteenth century Austrian Empress Maria Theresa to Rabindranath Tagore and Gandhi to 1970s Bollywood colour makes us adjust our take on the politics of the human sensorium as defamiliarising and disorienting The four chapters conjecture how European Indian and Papua New Guinean artists writers scientists activists anthropologists or their subjects sought to negotiate the highly problematic stasis of colour in the repainting of modernity Specifically the thesis of this book traces Europeans admiration and emulation of what they termed Indian colour to its gradual denigration and the emergence of a space of exception This space of exception pitted industrial colours against the colonial desire for a massive workforce whose slave like exploitation ignited riots against the production of pigments most notably indigo Feared or derided the figure of the vernacular dyer constituted a force capable of dismantling the imperial machinations of colour Colour thus wreaks havoc with Western expectations of biological determinism objectivity and eugenics Beyond the cracks of such discursive practice colour becomes a sentient and nomadic retort to be pitted against a perceived colonial hegemony The ideological reinvention of colour as a resource for independence struggles make it fundamental to multivalent genealogies of artistic and political action and their relevance to the present
