

- Description of the Process for Review of Pathology Data.
- Review of pathology data may begin with a request for pathology evaluation from regulatory review scientists or from the CAC. This happens when questions about the interpretation of pathology data arise during the scientific review of the toxicology information submitted in support of the safety of food ingredients.
- Requests for review are generally limited to specific interpretative questions, directing the reviewing pathologist' attention to findings in a particular organ or tissue. Occasionally, a reviewing pathologist is asked to examine all of the pathology findings in a study.
