countries in quantities not witnessed for over a decade Foreign Capital in the Latin American Economies looks at four countries that experienced particularly large inflows Argentina Chile Colombia and Mexico Private Capital Flows and Economic Development Helena Johanna Salomé, 1997 Emerging Capital Markets and Globalization Augusto de la

Torre, Sergio Schmukler, 2006-10-20 Back in the early 1990s economists and policy makers had high expectations about the prospects for domestic capital market development in emerging economies particularly in Latin America Unfortunately they are now faced with disheartening results Stock and bond markets remain illiquid and segmented Debt is concentrated at the short end of the maturity spectrum and denominated in foreign currency exposing countries to maturity and currency risk Capital markets in Latin America look particularly underdeveloped when considering the many efforts undertaken to improve the macroeconomic environment and to reform the institutions believed to foster capital market development The disappointing performance has made conventional policy recommendations questionable at best Emerging Capital Markets and Globalization analyzes where we stand and where we are heading on capital market development First it takes stock of the state and evolution of Latin American capital markets and related reforms over time and relative to other countries Second it analyzes the factors related to the development of capital markets with particular interest on measuring the impact of reforms And third in light of this analysis it discusses the prospects for capital market development in Latin America and emerging economies and the implications for the reform agenda Capital Flows to Latin America : is There Evidence of
