Boes, 2016-05-13 Frankfurt am Main in common with other imperial German cities enjoyed a large degree of legal autonomy during the early modern period and produced a unique and rich body of criminal archives In particular Frankfurt's Strafenbuch which records all criminal sentences between 1562 and 1696 provides a fascinating insight into contemporary penal trends Drawing on this and other rich resources Dr Boes reveals shifting and fluid attitudes towards crime and punishment and how these were conditioned by issues of gender class and social standing within the city's establishment She attributes a significant role in this process to the steady proliferation of municipal advocates jurists trained in Roman Law who wielded growing legal and penal prerogatives Over the course of the book it is demonstrated how the courts took an increasingly hard line with select groups of people accused of criminal behavior and the open manner with which advocates exercised cultural religious racial gender and sexual orientation repressions Parallel with this however is identified a trend of marked leniency towards soldiers who enjoyed an increasingly privileged place within the judicial system In light of this discrepancy between the treatment of civilians and soldiers the advocates actions highlight the emergence and spread of a distinct military judicial culture and Frankfurt's city council's contribution to the quasi militarization of a civilian court By highlighting the polarized and changing ways the courts dealt with civilian and military criminals a fuller picture is presented not just of Frankfurt's sentencing and penal practices but of broader attitudes within early modern Germany to issues of social position and cultural identity Local Population
