Logistics management operationalised in a healthcare context Malin Wiger, 2018-05-14 Healthcare improvements is constantly relevant and an important topic Healthcare is frequently being called upon to be more cost efficient and still fulfil demands regarding waiting times quality and availability Experience from structural changes in other contexts gives reason to be positive about the potential for logistics improvements in the healthcare sector as well From a logistics perspective patients pass different care functions units organisations and health facilities It is assumed that logistics management knowledge applied in healthcare can lead to lower costs shorter waiting times better patient service shorter treatment times and increased capacity This dissertation therefore presents an exploration of how logistics management theories can be operationalised in a healthcare context to understand care chain effectiveness Theoretically the operationalisation is done by systems theory creating compatibility between logistics management theories and the healthcare context As a first step features for a logistics system forms features for achieving care chain effectiveness High care chain effectiveness is thus a desired condition and the care delivery system is the tool to achieve it As the final step in the operationalisation the features for care chain effectiveness are in turn used to analyse today's practices Empirically the research is based on qualitative data from a single case study with multiple units of analysis It includes four care units at one of Sweden's university hospitals where the data is gathered through interviews insight into management systems and document analysis One of the main results is the 21 areas identified for analysing today's practices by means of features for care chain effectiveness Another main result is the four important concepts revealed through the operationalisation Lead time the episode of care from order to delivery as the amount of time for patient cases between first contact with healthcare and the last Patient order fulfilment fulfilment of patients needs broken down into several smaller steps performed over time within different care units in one or several organisations consisting of five sub processes order handling diagnosis treatment follow up and discharge True demand patients needs that is to be met and thus sets what care to deliver i.e. the production plan and the subordinate resource plan System boundaries defines which care units to include when focusing on the care delivery system's performance as a whole and should be more important than the performance and productivity of each individual care unit A number of direct suggestions for care chain improvement can also be found in the concluding remarks for example that objectives linked to economic influx or penalty narrow the system and that lead time data on an aggregated level is needed to cover episodes of care The theoretical contribution of the dissertation is to the field of logistics management through the methodological development of using these theories in a new context The managerial contribution is to healthcare managers through providing opportunities to improve care chains primarily by means of a greater understanding of care delivery systems

Indigenous Data Sovereignty and Policy Maggie Walter, Tahu Kukutai, Stephanie Russo Carroll, Desi Rodriguez-Lonebear, 2020-10-29 This book examines how Indigenous Peoples around the world are demanding greater data sovereignty and challenging the ways in which governments have historically used Indigenous data to develop policies and programs In the digital age governments are increasingly dependent on data and data analytics to inform their policies and decision making However Indigenous Peoples have often been the unwilling targets of policy interventions and have had little say over the collection use and application of data about them their lands and cultures At the heart of Indigenous Peoples demands for change are the enduring aspirations of self-determination over their institutions resources knowledge and information systems With contributors from Australia Aotearoa New Zealand North and South America and Europe this book offers a rich account of the potential for Indigenous data sovereignty to support human flourishing and to protect against the ever-growing threats of data-related risks and harms The Open Access version of this book available at <https://www.taylorfrancis.com/books/e/9780429273957> has been made available under a Creative Commons Attribution Non-Commercial No Derivatives 4.0 license

Negotiating Pasts in the Nordic Countries Anne Eriksen, Jón Viðar Sigurðsson, 2010-01-01 The authors present a number of case studies from the Middle Age to present time about how the past has been made meaningful and relevant to people living in later periods It is the process of selecting interpreting and passing on meaning that we call negotiating the past This process is loaded with tension in part stemming from the past itself but which is often due to the various agents involved in the process as they represent different interests understandings and points of view At the same time the process is marked by a wish to come to terms with unknown conditions to develop some consensus again not only with the past but also with one s contemporaries These dynamic and dialogical processes do not only concern the past as in history but rather a number of pasts which are sometimes in conflict but at other times harmoniously complement each other The book should be viewed as a contribution to the international and interdisciplinary field of collective memory which has grown large over the last decades Today studies of commemorations and festivals monuments exhibitions and museums historical films and narratives are numerous and terms such as social memory collective or collected memory lieux de m moire all demonstrate the scholarly interest in how the past or images of it is constructed composed and built up but also demolished dismantled and rejected To learn more about the processes when dealing with the past is an important key to understanding why and how societies and communities change and evolve The authors are Norwegian Danish and Swedish scholars who have collaborated in a network on the subject between 2007 and 2009 They are employed at universities and university libraries throughout Scandinavia Contributors Anders Berge Brita Brenna Bernard Eric Jensen Helge Jordheim Kyrre Kverndokk Anne Birgitte R nning Leiv Sem Karen Skovgaard Petersen Erling Sverdrup Sandmo Anna Wallette Ingenting har hänt Katja Timgren, 2016-09-01 Julen r 2003 Julia terv nder till f r ldrahemmet i den norrl ndska kustbyn I sitt gamla flickrum ppnar hon
