Prenatal Exposure To Toxicants Developmental Consequences:

Prenatal Exposure to Toxicants Herbert L. Needleman, David Bellinger, 1994 A subject of interest in environmental health is the effect of toxic substances upon a developing organism While other books in this area have addressed laboratory research on animals Prenatal Exposure to Toxicants focuses on the effect of pollutants on the human foetus The authors begin by outlining the principles of neurodevelopmental toxicology They then present data on the effects on humans of specific toxicants lead methyl mercury PCBs alcohol tobacco marijuana and cocaine They discuss substances whose toxic effects have been well documented in animals but not yet in humans such as chemical solvents pesticides carbon monoxide and xenostrogens In a concluding section they look at methodologic regulatory and legal issues Accessible to both the clinical and the developmental specialist this book should be useful to toxicologists and other environmental health professionals behavioural scientists obstetricians gynaecologists paediatricians and geneticists Human Developmental Toxicants James L. Schardein, Orest T. Macina, 2006-08-15 Presenting the first database of its kind this unique reference illustrates the relationships between the chemistry and developmental toxicity of a number of important pharmaceuticals and industrial toxicants Human Developmental Toxicants contains up to date and concise information on the chemical structures properties and biological activities for 50 known agents that adversely affect prenatal and postnatal human development in terms of growth viability structure and function This book presents data linking chemical and structural properties of specific toxicants as they relate to toxic effects dosage timing and route of exposure Focusing on one compound per chapter the book also includes associated biological data from animals for each agent covered Accompanying downloadable resources summarize all of the data discussed in the text within an electronic database In addition the CD contains three dimensional structure representations and 49 calculated physicochemical and topological parameters of the selected molecules This information is useful for building structure activity relationship SAR models linking the chemical properties with observed human developmental toxicity As scientists continue to explore how chemicals alter human development Human Developmental Toxicants contains the necessary information to further identify which chemical properties are responsible for adverse effects This reference provides toxicologists teratologists chemists and other scientists with the latest data and information needed to perform risk assessments predict chemicals that may produce developmental toxicity and regulate harmful exposure Human Developmental Neurotoxicology David C. Bellinger, 2006-04-06 This reference describes the most recent developments in the design execution and interpretation of human developmental neurotoxicology studies Assessing critical issues and controversies in the field this guide focuses on dose response effect relationships and explores challenges in the measurement of exposure to different types of chemicals Workshop Report on Developmental Neurotoxic Effects Associated with Exposure to PCBs, 1993 Toxicological Effects of Methylmercury National Research Council, Commission on Life Sciences, Board on Environmental Studies and Toxicology, Committee on the

Toxicological Effects of Methylmercury, 2000-10-27 Mercury is widespread in our environment Methylmercury one organic form of mercury can accumulate up the aquatic food chain and lead to high concentrations in predatory fish When consumed by humans contaminated fish represent a public health risk Combustion processes especially coal fired power plants are major sources of mercury contamination in the environment The U S Environmental Protection Agency EPA is considering regulating mercury emissions from those plants Toxicological Effects of Methylmercury reviews the health effects of methylmercury and discusses the estimation of mercury exposure from measured biomarkers how differences between individuals affect mercury toxicity and appropriate statistical methods for analysis of the data and thoroughly compares the epidemiological studies available on methylmercury Included are discussions of current mercury levels on public health and a delineation of the scientific aspects and policy decisions involved in the regulation of mercury This report is a valuable resource for individuals interested in the public health effects and regulation of mercury The report also provides an excellent example of the implications of decisions in the risk assessment process for a larger audience Introduction to Neurobehavioral Toxicology Hugh A. Tilson, R.M.A. Jaspers, L.M.W. Kornet, J.M. van Ree, 1998-11-25 Introduction to Neurobehavioral Toxicology Food and Environment examines the effects of chemicals on the central and peripheral nervous system and the subsequent changes in behavior with a focus on the toxicity of food components and behavioral effects of environmental toxicants Topics addressed include acute and chronic effects reversible and Environmental Effects on Cognitive Abilities Robert J. Sternberg, Elena L. Grigorenko, 2014-04-08 It sometimes seems that it is difficult to pick up a current newspaper or a magazine without it containing a story about some behavioral characteristic for which it has been found that a gene is responsible Even aspects of behavior that one would feel certain are environmentally controlled are now being attributed in part to the effects of the genes But genes never act alone Their effects are always filtered through the environment The goal of this volume is to discuss how the environment influences the development and the maintenance of cognitive abilities It is a successor to the editors 1997 volume Intelligence Heredity and Environment and a companion to their new volume Family Environment and Intellectual Functioning A Life Span Perspective Taken together the two volume set comprises the most comprehensive existing work on the relation between the environment and cognitive abilities Psychologists parents social workers educators and employers are all likely to find this book of interest Reproductive and Developmental Toxicology Kenneth S Korach, 1998-03-27 This timely resource offers extensive discussions on the pharmacological environmental endocrinological and natural factors that alter reproductive or developmental processes elucidating the effects of toxicants on mechanisms of reproduction Describing biological actions common to both genders as well as gender specific processes Reproducti Language and Literacy Development James P. Byrnes, Barbara A. Wasik, 2012-03-23 This book has been replaced by Language and Literacy Development Second Edition ISBN 978 1 4625 4004 4 Handbook of Attachment-Based Interventions Howard Steele, Miriam Steele, 2019-09-10 The first volume to showcase science based interventions that have been demonstrated effective in promoting attachment security this is a vital reference and clinical guide for practitioners With a major focus on strengthening caregiving relationships in early childhood the Handbook also includes interventions for school age children at risk adolescents and couples with an emphasis on father involvement in parenting A consistent theme is working with children and parents who have been exposed to trauma and other adverse circumstances Leading authorities describe how their respective approaches are informed by attachment theory and research how sessions are structured and conducted special techniques used such as video feedback the empirical evidence base for the approach and training requirements Many chapters include illustrative case material

The Environment and Mental Health Ante Lundberg, 2013-05-13 Environmental illness is a concept of growing concern to all health professionals Patients with problems presumably caused by sick buildings electromagnetic fields and hypersensitivity to chemicals to name a few are often referred to psychologists psychiatrists and other counselors The battery worker with fatigue headaches abdominal pain and an elevated lead level the assembly worker with pain and numbness in her hand and delayed median nerve conduction the patient who develops typical contact dermatitis after working with epoxies these are straightforward cases But they are in the minority In many cases needy demanding and difficult patients present complex and challenging psychological issues Practitioners often lack the training or wisdom to handle these issues effectively We know that exposure to lead mercury and PCBs affect psychological development and behavior we know much less about the effects of thousands of other chemicals in the environment In addition global climate change social disruption and the spread of infections will in the near future expose people to novel environmental threats Symptoms caused by toxins can overlap those caused by fear stress and depression and the clinical picture can mimic a variety of other mental disorders On the other hand the natural environment can also be a healer Research shows that hospital stays are shortened and the need for pain medication reduced for patients exposed to nature even in images or to the company of animals Nursing home patients live longer if allowed to keep pets and one controlled study shows that caring for animals reduces disruptive behavior in even the most difficult ADD children This book offers the first overview of the many ways the environment can affect mental health and illness It will prove to be an important and valuable resource for physicians in psychiatry public health and environmental medicine for clinical and counseling psychologists and social workers and for environmental researchers and advocates worldwide
