Prevention And Early Detection Of Colorectal Cancer:

Prevention and Early Detection of Colorectal Cancer Graeme P. Young, Paul Rozen, Bernard Levin, 1996 This is an overview of the issues involved in prevention and early detection of colorectal cancer providing up to date practical advice for clinicians Possible management strategies for those at risk are provided taking into account the biological principles of colorectal cancer development epidemiological data and emerging genetic information as well as social and environmental factors

Colorectal Cancer in Clinical Practice Bernard Levin, Paul Rozen, Stephen J. Spann, Graeme P. Young, 2001-12-20 Colorectal cancer is one of the major malignancies affecting westernized societies both in terms of incidence and as a cause of mortality it is however a preventable and a detectable disease Although most countries do not actively promote preventive policies for their general population this trend is gradually changing In line with this current development Colorectal Cancer in Clinical Practice examines prevention and early detection of this disease as well as discussion of management issues It will provide the clinician with an accessible and up to date guide on the primary and secondary prevention of colorectal cancer and will be of particular interest to primary care physicians and specialists in gastroenterology oncology and surgery

Colorectal Cancer in Clinical Practice Bernard Levin, Paul Rozen, Stephen J. Spann, Graeme P. Young, 2005-11-23 The rapid rate of development in the fields of prevention early detection and management for colorectal cancer means that the successful first edition of this accessible guide has needed to be updated and revised throughout Primary care physicians and specialists alike will continue to find this an indispensable synopsis of the issues and options

The IOM s National Cancer Policy Board estimated in 2003 that even modest efforts to implement known tactics for cancer prevention and early detection could result in up to a 29 percent drop in cancer deaths in about 20 years The IOM s National Cancer Policy Forum which succeeded the Board after it was disbanded in 2005 continued the Board s work to outline ways to increase screening in the U S On February 25 and 26 2008 the Forum convened a workshop to discuss screening for colorectal cancer Colorectal cancer screening remains low despite strong evidence that screening prevents deaths With the aim to make recommended colorectal cancer screening more widespread the workshop discussed steps to be taken at the clinic community and health system levels Workshop speakers representing a broad spectrum of leaders in the field identified major barriers to increased screening and described strategies to overcome these obstacles This workshop summary highlights the information presented as well as the subsequent discussion about actions needed to increase colorectal screening and ultimately to prevent more colorectal cancer deaths      The Early Detection of Colorectal

Cancer Care in Low-Resource Areas National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Institute of Medicine, Board on Health Care Services, National Cancer Policy Forum, 2016-11-01 Though cancer was once considered to be a problem primarily in wealthy nations low and middle income countries now bear a majority share of the global cancer burden and cancer often surpasses the burden of infectious diseases in these countries Effective low cost cancer control options are available for some malignancies with the World Health Organization estimating that these interventions could facilitate the prevention of approximately one third of cancer deaths worldwide But these interventions remain inaccessible for many people in the world especially those residing in low resource communities that are characterized by a lack of funds on an individual or societal basis to cover health infrastructure and care costs Few guidelines and strategies for cancer control consider the appropriateness and feasibility of interventions in low resource settings and may undermine the effectiveness of these efforts For example interventions that are designed for high resource settings may not account for important considerations in low resource settings such as resource constraints infrastructure requirements or whether a community has the capacity to deliver downstream cancer care Patients in resource constrained communities continue to face delayed diagnoses of cancer potentially resulting in the diagnosis of later stage cancers and worsened patient outcomes In addition social stigmas geopolitical issues and cultural norms may limit access to cancer care in certain communities Recognizing the challenges of providing cancer care in these settings the National Academies of Sciences Engineering and Medicine developed a workshop series examining cancer care in low resource communities This report summarizes the presentations and discussions from the first workshop which focused on cancer prevention and early detection
