managed care organizations and large employers can use this information to establish diabetes care principles and to assure quality diabetes care and treatment options in health plans NDEP encourages people with or at risk for diabetes and their families to participate actively with their health care team to plan and implement their care While these principles serve as a guide for diabetes prevention and management each person and his or her health care team should determine a specific prevention or management plan Team care is essential for effective diabetes prevention and management Team structure is best determined by the practice setting Teams should be led by the most appropriate health care professional and may include primary care physicians diabetes educators endocrinologists dietitians nurses nurse practitioners pharmacists physician assistants psychologists dental professionals exercise professionals social workers specialists for care of the eye foot heart and kidney and others as necessary Many of these team members also may be certified diabetes educators Trained lay educators such as promotores and community health workers can be effective team members Other elements of importance to the delivery of diabetes care in addition to team care such as creating a patient registry assessing practice needs implementing processes of care connecting to community resources and evaluating outcomes are presented in detail on www.BetterDiabetesCare.nih.gov This website provides tools and resources to help health care professionals implement systems changes Early identification and management of pre diabetes can delay or prevent the onset of type 2 diabetes In people with type 1 and type 2 diabetes ongoing comprehensive diabetes care including the ABCs of diabetes A1C for glucose Blood pressure and Cholesterol can prevent or control diabetes related microvascular and macrovascular complications With proper medical management education self care and attention to behavior social and environmental factors people with diabetes and pre diabetes can live long active and productive lives Gerontological Nursing: Competencies for Care
