Background. Previous studies have demonstrated the effect of adult nursing skill mix, staffing ratios, and level of education on patient deaths, complication rates, and failure to rescue (FTR). To date, only one known study had examined the effect of nursing experience and education on postoperative pediatric cardiac operations.

Methods. Nursing survey data were linked to The Society of Thoracic Surgeons (STS) Congenital Heart Surgery Database for patients undergoing cardiac operations (2010 to 2011). Logistic regression models were used to estimate associations of nursing education and years of clinical experience with in-hospital mortality rates, complication rates, and FTR. Generalized estimating equations and robust standard error estimates were used to account for within-center correlation of outcomes.

Results. Among 15,463 patients (29 hospitals), the in-hospital mortality rate was 2.8%, postoperative complications occurred in 42.4%, and the FTR rate was 6.4%. After covariate adjustment, pediatric critical care units with a higher proportion of nurses with a Bachelor of Science degree or higher had lower odds of complication (odds ratio for 10% increase, 0.85; 95% confidence interval, 0.76 to 0.96; $p = 0.009$). Units with a higher proportion of nurses with more than 2 years of experience had lower mortality rates (odds ratio for 10% increase, 0.92; 95% confidence interval, 0.85 to 0.99; $p = 0.025$).

Conclusions. This is the first study to demonstrate that higher levels of nursing education and experience are significantly associated with fewer complications after pediatric cardiac operations and aligns with our previous findings on their association with reduced deaths. These results provide data for pediatric hospital leaders and reinforce the importance of organization-wide mentoring strategies for new nurses and retention strategies for experienced nurses.

The effect of nursing care on patient outcomes is well established [1–6]. Evidence demonstrating the effect of nursing skill mix, staffing ratios, and level of education on outcomes including patient deaths, complication rates, and failure to rescue (FTR), defined as the probability of death after a complication, has been reported from studies of a variety of adult patient populations [2, 6–17]. These outcomes have been a particular concern for the adult surgical population, citing a multitude of contributing factors, including patient, organizational, and human [10, 18, 19].

During the past decade, we have investigated the effect of pediatric nursing characteristics for children undergoing congenital heart operations [3, 20–22]. Our initial examinations revealed a limited effect of nursing skill mix and staffing ratios on deaths for congenital heart surgical patients, despite a wide variation in staffing models across children's hospitals nationally [21]. We further documented the variation in pediatric nursing- and unit-based characteristics through development of a national survey of 43 pediatric cardiovascular programs in free-standing children's hospitals in the United States [20]. Linking this survey data to risk-adjusted outcomes for congenital heart surgical patients revealed a significant relationship between education and years of nursing experience and deaths [3]. This first-time finding in pediatric nursing showed that not only was years of nursing experience significantly associated with deaths, the level of nursing experience in a unit's staffing model was also associated with deaths [3].

New knowledge is being generated that relates patient factors to death, complications, resource utilization, and FTR for congenital heart surgical patients [23–30].
