Custom Politics in Urban Africa A Study of Hausa Migrants in Yoruba Towns offers a detailed examination of the intersection of custom politics and long distance trade within the urban settings of West Africa This scholarly work focuses on the Hausa communities in Yoruba towns exploring how these migrant groups maintain cultural distinctiveness while adapting to new political and economic realities Through an intensive study of the Hausa diaspora the book highlights how traditional norms values and ceremonial practices are used to establish informal political organizations These structures not only safeguard economic monopolies but also navigate the complexities of ethnic interaction and political power in rapidly evolving urban environments Based on extensive fieldwork conducted in Nigeria from 1962 to 1963 the monograph provides a micro historical perspective tracing the sociopolitical and economic dynamics of Hausa communities within the broader context of post colonial change By analyzing processes such as ethnic reorganization religious transformations and the intricate workings of long distance trade in cattle and kola the book illuminates how ethnic groups use custom as a political strategy in diverse settings Drawing on comparative analyses the work contributes to understanding political ethnicity as a global phenomenon and positions social anthropology as integral to the study of power identity and societal transformation in modern contexts This title is part of UC Press s Voices Revived program which commemorates University of California Press s mission to seek out and cultivate the brightest minds and give them voice reach and impact Drawing on a backlist dating to 1893 Voices Revived makes high quality peer reviewed scholarship accessible once again using print on demand technology This title was originally published in 1969 Electoral Politics and Africa's Urban Transition Noah L. Two aspects of contemporary urban life in Africa are often described as sources of political change the emergence of a large urban middle class and high levels of ethnic diversity and inter ethnic social contact Many expected that these factors would help spark a transition away from ethnic competition and clientelism toward more programmatic elections Focusing on urban Ghana this book shows that the growing middle class and high levels of ethnic diversity are not having the anticipated political effects Instead urban Ghana is stuck in a trap clientelism and ethnic voting persist in many urban neighborhoods despite changes to the socio economic characteristics and policy preferences of voters Through a unique examination of intra urban variation in patterns of electoral competition Nathan explains why this trap exists demonstrates its effects on political behavior and explores how new democracies like Ghana can move past it Urban Politics in Nigeria Howard Wolpe, 2023-11-15
