the connections between the Euro and European citizenship This timely contribution by renowned experts provides a greater understanding of the Euro at a time when it is not clear whether it should be celebrated or commemorated and looks into aspects of the single currency that are the base of the social trust that supports it and that is at stake in the present crisis It will be an essential tool to anyone studying the political social and economic development of the E U

Markets and Measurements in Nineteenth-Century Britain Aashish Velkar, 2012-06-25 Measurements are a central institutional component of markets and economic exchange By the nineteenth century the measurement system in Britain was desperately in need of revision a multiplicity of measurement standards proliferation of local or regional weights and measures and a confusing array of measurement practices made everyday measurements unreliable Aashish Velkar uncovers how metrology and economic logic alone failed to make measurements reliable and discusses the importance of localised practices in shaping trust in them Markets and Measurements in Nineteenth Century Britain steers away from the traditional explanations of measurement reliability based on the standardisation and centralisation of metrology the focus is on changing measurement practices in local economic contexts Detailed case studies from the industrial revolution suggest that such practices were path dependent and anthropocentric Therefore whilst standardised metrology may have improved precision it was localised practices that determined the reliability and trustworthiness of measurements in economic contexts

The Expert Consumer Alain Chatriot, Marie-Emmanuelle Chessel, 2017-09-29 Recent work has focused on the politics of consumption and its manifestation in a number of situations This volume extends these debates providing a tighter focus and contributing to a noticeable gap in the field that numerous scholars are beginning to turn towards that is organizations of consumers themselves who have chosen to speak for all consumers and similar such bodies of experts which act on behalf of consumers The volume is fortunate in drawing upon a number of scholars who are about to publish major works on the subject but who are happy to provide summary versions of their work for the volume The book pays particular attention to specific moments in consumer mobilization and expertise capturing the range of types of expert consumers across the twentieth century from ethical consumer groups at the beginning to intellectuals housewives economists and public officials It addresses questions on the nature of consumer organizing which bodies can speak for consumers whether one consumer voice can ever be identified and the relationship between consumption and citizenship Overview pieces demonstrate the larger narratives involved in the study of the expert consumer whilst more comparative essays set out the nature of transatlantic exchanges Other contributions point to the similarities across seemingly different consumption regimes while case studies of specific organisations and key historical moments draw out the particularities of consumer expertise
