Politique De Concurrence Et Les Droits De Propriete Intellectuelle Dans Leconomie Du Savoir:

Competition policy and intellectual property rights in the knowledge-based economy Robert D. Anderson, Nancy T. Gallini, 1998 S'assurer d'un taux élevé d'innovation et d'amélioration de la productivité est l'un des principaux défis qui attendent l'économie canadienne à l'abord du prochain siècle. Afin de relever ce défi, il est primordial d'appliquer avec discernement des politiques gouvernementales bien conçues pour maximiser l'incitation à innover tout en maintenant une saine rivalité entre les entreprises qui volent sur le marché. En examinant ces questions, nous devons garder l'esprit non seulement les questions qui nous intéressent ici même au pays, mais aussi les événements qui surviennent à l'étranger. Ces dernières années, les États-Unis, la Communauté européenne et le Japon ont réexaminé le traitement qu'ils accordent la propriété intellectuelle dans le cadre de leur législation sur la concurrence et ils ont publié des lignes directrices officielles pour guider l'application de la loi dans ce domaine. Cet ouvrage est le fruit d'un programme de recherche entrepris par le Bureau de la concurrence en collaboration avec l'Office de la propriété intellectuelle du Canada et la Direction générale de l'analyse de la politique microéconomique d'Industrie Canada. Il renferme des études de fonds rédigées par des juristes et des économistes de renommée internationale et des analystes chevronnés du secteur gouvernemental ayant voulu au sien des organismes chargés de l'application de la politique de concurrence au Canada et aux États-Unis. Infrastructure Politique Nationale Et Investissement Étranger Direct Steven Globerman, Daniel M. Shapiro, Canada. Industry Canada, Industry Canada Research Publications Program, 2002 It is widely argued that a country's economic performance over time is determined to a great extent by its political institutional and legal environment. We refer to these public institutions and policies as the national political infrastructure. NPI of a country. This report focusses on the linkage between measures of NPI and foreign direct investment (FDI) flows. Specifically, it tests the hypothesis that FDI will be attracted to regions characterized by more favourable NPIs. It also argues that countries with more favourable NPIs will create more domestic multinational enterprises and they will therefore see more capital outflows so that the net effect on capital flows may be uncertain. The study employs 2 sets of FDI data both covering the period 1995-1997. The 1st set measures total FDI inflows and outflows to and from a sample of 144 developed and developing countries. The 2nd set uses United States Bureau of Economic Analysis data to measure the inflows of U.S. FDI to these same countries. Document de Travail, 2003 Commerce International, Le Commerce Interprovincial Et la Croissance Des Provinces Canadiennes Serge Coulombe, Canada. Industry Canada, 2003 This paper provides an empirical analysis of the comparative evolution of interprovincial international trade and their effects on regional growth for the Canadian provinces since 1981. It first establishes the trend in the relationship between the ratios of interprovincial international trade to gross domestic product, revealing a sharp break that occurred around 1991. The analysis casts doubt on the pure diversion model often used in trade modelling. The second part uses a conditional convergence growth model to estimate the respective long-run effects of interprovincial international trade on Canadian regional economies specifically in relation to productivity relative gross domestic product per capita and job creation The final chapter discusses implications of the results for regional economies economic policy issues Lien Entre L'innovation Et la Productivité Dans Les Industries Manufacturières Wulong Gu,Jianmin Tang,Canada. Industry Canada,2003 This paper argues that the lack of evidence for a strong link between innovation patents per worker technology adoption measured as real investment in machinery and skill intensity measured as the employment share of workers with a university education The authors then examine the relationship between innovation productivity in 14 Canadian manufacturing industries over 1980 1997 using the new measure The results also show that the length of time it takes for innovation to have a positive significant impact on productivity differs across industries Politique de Concurrence Et Les Droits de Propriété Intellectuelle Dans L'économie Du Savoir, La. Nous devons Economic Impact of Carbon Abatement Policies and Market Structure Canada. Minerals and Metals Sector, Mokhtar Souissi, Carolyn MacLeod, Canada. Industry Canada, 2001. This paper develops a forward looking dynamic general equilibrium model with imperfect competition to study the welfare sectoral and aggregate effects of Canada's compliance to the Kyoto Protocol. In particular it introduces a Chamberlinian competition framework in the analysis in order to capture firms departure from marginal cost pricing. It analyzes both the long term and the transitional effects of the Protocol in Canada by using a national carbon emission permit scheme for fossil fuel use as the cost effective policy instrument required to achieve the desired level of carbon emissions. It assesses the underestimation of the welfare and GDP losses if any associated with the assumption of perfect competition in all markets.

Répercussions Sectorielles de L'application Du Protocole de Kyoto Randall Wigle, Canada. Industry Canada, Industry Canada Research Publications Program, 2001. This paper looks at Canada's compliance with its Kyoto Protocol obligations focussing on 2 questions: What sectors are likely to be the hardest hit and conversely which might benefit from various modalities of compliance? How do the costs of compliance change when the domestic implementation plan exempts some sectors? The analysis is conducted using a simulation model of the world economy. Specifically a static Computable General Equilibrium CGE model based on the Global Trade Analysis Project data is used. The analysis identifies 31 sectors and 11 regions. The study first looks at 2 core cost effective policy approaches: national and global carbon permit trading by way of placing the model's results in the context of other existing CGE carbon models.

Définition Et Évaluation Des Liens Entre Commerce Électronique Et Croissance de la Productivité Steven Globerman, Canada. Industry Canada, Industry Canada Research Publications Program, 2001. The purpose of this study is to identify and evaluate the potential linkages between electronic commerce and the productivity performance of the Canadian economy. It defines e-commerce and productivity and presents historical data on the 2 phenomena. It describes a conceptual framework within which the major linkages between e-commerce and productivity performance might be identified and evaluated. It discusses some preliminary evidence bearing upon the nature and magnitude of these linkages. It identifies and briefly discusses several prominent policy issues.

Are Canadian-controlled Manufacturing Firms Less Productive Than Their Foreign-controlled Counterparts? Ponugoti Someshwar Rao, Jianmin Tang, Canada. Industry Canada, Industry Canada Research Publications Program, 2000. The purpose of this paper is to analyze the multi factor productivity gap between Canadian and foreign controlled manufacturing companies The paper examines firm level data to attempt to answer the following important research questions whether foreign controlled manufacturing firms are more or less productive than Canadian controlled firms whether the productivity gap widened or narrowed in the 1990s and the factors that explain or do not explain the difference in productivity performance Factors examined include labour quality degree of unionization and firm size
