

Bring chicken to a boil in a large stock pot on stove. Turn down and cover with lid ajar. Simmer until chicken is done. While chicken is cooking, mix salt into flour. Set aside. Beat eggs and add milk. Mix flour into egg mixture to make a stiff dough. Add more flour if necessary. Roll out thin. Let sit for 10 min. or until chicken is done. Roll up and slice in inch or so thick slices. Separate noodles. When chicken is done, debone and skin if necessary and cut into bite-size pieces. Return chicken to broth and bring to a boil. Drop noodles into boiling broth and cook uncovered 10 min. or until done. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

Note: This is the same as the recipe to make homemade noodles. They were named Dump-Noods by my mom and brother Dan when I lacked the patience to let them sit two hours before cooking. They look like a noodle but puff like a dumpling. I had considered naming my first cookbook, Dump-Noods and Other Favorite Recipes.

GRILLED CHICKEN NUGGETS

Preheat George Foreman grill. Place chicken on grill and season to taste. Close grill and cook for 10 minutes or until chicken is done.

Note: We were improvising a lunch recently and I realized that these are being sold in fast food restaurants. Definitely easy and good. Serve with choice of sauce, BBQ, ranch, honey mustard, or mayo/hot sauce.

Unpalatable Carrie Helms Tippen, 2025-01-15 The cookbook genre is highly conventional with an orientation toward celebration and success From glossy photographs to heartwarming stories and adjective rich ingredient lists the cookbook tradition primes readers for pleasure Yet the overarching narrative of the region is often one of pain loss privation exploitation poverty and suffering of various kinds While some cookbook writers go to great lengths to avoid reminding readers of this painful past others invoke that pain as a marker of southern authenticity Still others use stories of southern suffering as an opportunity to make space for reconciliation reparation or apology for past wrongs In Unpalatable Stories of Pain and Pleasure in Southern Cookbooks author Carrie Helms Tippen attempts to understand the unique rhetorical situation of the southern cookbook as it negotiates a tension between the expectations of the genre and the prevailing metanarratives of the southern experience one focused on pleasure and the other rooted in pain Through an analysis of commercially published southern cookbooks from the 1990s to the present Tippen examines the range of rhetorical purposes and strategies writers have employed some of which undermine the reality of a painful past and cause harm or violence and others which serve as tools for truth and reconciliation
