

Psycholinguistic Factors in Second Language Acquisition: Foreign Language Teaching via Coaching

Oksana Chaika

Abstract

This chapter conducts a comprehensive investigation into foreign language acquisition (FLA) using coaching methodologies, with a focus on psycholinguistic factors in second language acquisition (SLA). The study delves into the intricate interplay of psychological and linguistic elements influencing SLA, particularly language aptitude, anxiety, motivation, and self-regulated learning strategies. The research methodology details the design, participant selection, data collection, and analysis methods. Findings underscore the significance of these factors in SLA and their impact on learning outcomes. Implications for language teaching and curriculum development are highlighted, offering insights for educators. The chapter acknowledges limitations and suggests future research directions. This contributes to understanding the complex relationship between psycholinguistic factors and SLA, benefiting both educators and researchers in the field.

1. Introduction

In recent years, the exploration of psycholinguistic factors in the context of second language acquisition (SLA) has garnered heightened attention, reflecting a deepening interest in understanding the intricate processes that govern foreign language learning [1–4]. As language educators and researchers strive to enhance pedagogical practices [5, 6], a profound comprehension of the psychological and linguistic dimensions that underlie successful language acquisition has become indispensable. Second Language Learning and Language Teaching Vivian Cook, 2016-05-05

Second Language Learning and Language Teaching provides an introduction to the application of second language acquisition research to language teaching. Assuming no previous background in second language acquisition or language teaching methods, this text starts by introducing readers to the basic issues of second language acquisition research. It then examines how people learn particular aspects of the second language such as grammar, vocabulary, pronunciation and the writing system and the strategies they adopt in their learning and the differences between individuals. Final chapters look at second language learning in a broader context, the goals of language teaching and how teaching methods relate to SLA research. This newly updated fifth edition builds on the comprehensive scope of earlier editions while also addressing more recent developments in the field, particularly multilingual approaches to language teaching.

Vocabulary Learning Strategies and Foreign Language Acquisition Višnja Pavičić Takač, 2008-02-04

The book discusses vocabulary learning strategies as an integral subgroup of language learning strategies. It defines language learning strategies in general and their features on the basis of cognitive theory and relevant models of second language acquisition as the basis for empirical research. Furthermore, the book gives a survey of research on vocabulary learning strategies and describes three original empirical studies. Thus, the book attempts at integrating the approaches of theories of second language acquisition, the theory and practice of instructed foreign language learning and the findings of current empirical research.
