

Evaluation Reporting:

Keeping these considerations in mind—engaging stakeholders, revisiting the evaluation purpose, and defining the target audience—you are now ready for evaluation reporting. These considerations will direct the scope of the evaluation report, the way findings are discussed, and the manner in which the report is delivered. This portion of the evaluation guide focuses on key aspects for preparing an evaluation report designed to ensure use.

Types of Evaluation Reports

Evaluation reports can take on many forms, from detailed reports to one-page briefs, but the primary goal in any evaluation is to ensure that the findings are used by the stakeholders. This section highlights two different approaches for evaluation reporting—traditional and action-oriented—while focusing on the benefits of action-oriented reports.

Traditional Reports

Often, formal evaluations are followed by formal comprehensive reports, which is the traditional style of reporting. Traditional reports are frequently required to satisfy funding requirements and serve a number of uses. Traditional reports

- ▶ Add to the knowledge base of evaluation practice
- ▶ Provide context and historical reference
- ▶ Serve as foundation for supplemental reports
- ▶ Provide accountability

Although traditional reports have great value, they may not be conducive to ensuring use of the evaluation results. Traditional reports can be expensive, time-consuming to prepare, and too lengthy for easy reading.

In many cases, a funder may require a comprehensive evaluation report for program accountability and reporting requirements. In such instances, it's important to comply with reporting requirements as requested by the funder.

It can be helpful to consider the evaluation reporting approach that will prompt your audience to action. One such type of reporting is action-oriented reporting. An action-oriented report is intentionally shorter than a traditional formal report and is focused, simple, and geared toward a particular audience.⁴
