E. H. Neville, 2012-03-27 Today's British soldiers serving in Iraq will know the country in which much of this unit history is set the land between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers known in the Great War as Mesopotamia Unusually for such a work of record the author lays down the background to the Great War in the Middle East in some detail stressing such factors as the German Turkish alliance the building of the Berlin to Baghdad railway and Britain's interest in the Persian Iranian oilfields He also reports events with a topical resonance today such as anti British riots in Basra and the declaration of a Jihad The 43rd took part in the defeat of the Turks at Khan Baghdadi and after the armistice in the spring of 1919 was re deployed to Archangel in northern Russia in an effort to nip the Bolshevik revolution in the bud Under the command of General Sir Edmund Ironside the 43rd battled gallantly against Bolshevik forces although beset by flies mosquitoes bloodsucking ticks called clegs and their unreliable White Russian allies At last partly through lack of progress and partly due to political pressure against an unpopular foreign adventure another echo of today the unit was withdrawn in the autumn of 1919 An intriguing and unusual account of two little known campaigns with eerily prophetic echoes of events in Iraq today
