Princess Of Cleves The:

The Princess of Cleves Madame de La Fayette, 2011-09-01 This groundbreaking novel made a splash when it was initially published in 1678 changing the course of literary fiction forever Rather than following in the same vein as the one dimensional romances that preceded it The Princess of Cleves tackles its characters inner dilemmas with unprecedented sophistication and nuance The Princess of Cleves - the Original Classic Edition Madame de La Fayette, 2012-06 The Princess of Cleves by Madame de Lafayette The Original Classic Edition Finally available a high quality book of the original classic edition This is a new and freshly published edition of this culturally important work which is now at last again available to you Enjoy this classic work today These selected paragraphs distill the contents and give you a quick look inside They were no sooner gone but they began to launch out into the praises of Mademoiselle de Chartres without bounds they were sensible at length that they had run into excess in her commendation and so both gave over for that time but they were obliged the next day to renew the subject for this new risen beauty long continued to supply discourse to the whole Court the Queen herself was lavish in her praise and showed her particular marks of favour the Queen Dauphin made her one of her favourites and begged her mother to bring her often to her Court the Princesses the Kings daughters made her a party in all their diversions in short she had the love and admiration of the whole Court except that of the Duchess of Valentinois not that this young beauty gave her umbrage long experience convinced her she had nothing to fear on the part of the King and she had to great a hatred for the Viscount of Chartres whom she had endeavoured to bring into her interest by marrying him with one of her daughters and who had joined himself to the Queens party that she could not have the least favourable thought of a person who bore his name and was a great object of his friendship Madam de Valentinois being jealous of a lady whom he had formerly loved and whose wit and beauty were capable of lessening her interest joined herself to the Constable who was no more desirous than herself that the King should marry a sister of the Duke of Guise they possessed the deceased King with their sentiments and though he mortally hated the Duchess of Valentinois and loved the Queen he joined his endeavours with theirs to prevent the divorce but in order to take from the King all thoughts of marrying the Queen my mother they struck up a marriage between her and the King of Scotland who had had for his first wife the Kings sister and they did this because it was the easiest to be brought to a conclusion though they failed in their engagements to the King of England who was very desirous of marrying her and that failure wanted but little of occasioning a rupture between the two Crowns for Henry the Eighth was inconsolable when he found himself disappointed in his expectations of marrying my mother and whatever other Princess of France was proposed to him he always said nothing could make him amends for her he had been deprived of He frequently went to the Queen Dauphins Court because the Princess of Cleves was often there and he was very easy in leaving people in the opinion they had of his passion for that Queen he put so great a value on Madam de Cleves that he resolved to be rather wanting in giving proofs of his love than to hazard its being publicly known he did not so much as

He speaks of it to the Viscount de Chartres who was his intimate friend and from whom he concealed nothing the truth is he conducted this affair with so much discretion that nobody suspected he was in love with Madam de Cleves except the Chevalier de Guise and she would scarcely have perceived it herself if the inclination she had for him had not led her into a particular attention to all his actions but which she was convinced of it The Princess of Cleves Fabienne
