The Story of Paul Boyton: Voyages on All the Great Rivers of the World Paul Boyton,2019-12-19 In The Story of Paul Boyton Voyages on All the Great Rivers of the World Paul Boyton weaves a captivating narrative that chronicles his remarkable journeys along the globe s most significant waterways The book is not only an adventure memoir but also a compelling exploration of the diverse cultures and landscapes that he encounters Through vivid descriptions and engaging anecdotes Boyton employs a narrative style that is both reflective and spirited capturing the essence of each river as a living entity His work fits into the 19th century tradition of exploration literature reflecting the era s fascination with the unknown and the sublime power of nature Paul Boyton often dubbed the Human Torpedo for his daring feats on water was driven by a profound love for adventure and a desire to connect with the world beyond the ordinary His unique background as a performer and daredevil equipped him with the skills and passion necessary to undertake these extensive voyages Boyton s experiences offer insight into the motivations of explorers during his time revealing the interplay between risk curiosity and the human spirit This book is highly recommended for readers interested in exploration adventure and travel literature as it provides a vivid lens through which to appreciate the grandeur and challenges of river navigation Boyton s eloquent prose not only entertains but also informs making it an essential read for anyone captivated by the beauty and allure of the world s

Mehalah: A Story of the Salt Marshes Sabine Baring-Gould, 2020-09-28 Between the mouths of the Blackwater and the Colne on the east coast of Essex lies an extensive marshy tract veined and freckled in every part with water It is a wide waste of debatable ground contested by sea and land subject to incessant incursions from the former but stubbornly maintained by the latter At high tide the appearance is that of a vast surface of moss or Sargasso weed floating on the sea with rents and patches of shining water traversing and dappling it in all directions The creeks some of considerable length and breadth extend many miles inland and are arteries whence branches out a fibrous tissue of smaller channels flushed with water twice in the twenty four hours At noon tides and especially at the equinoxes the sea asserts its royalty over this vast region and overflows the whole leaving standing out of the flood only the long island of Mersea and the lesser islet called the Ray This latter is a hill of gravel rising from the heart of the Marshes crowned with ancient thorn trees and possessing what is denied the mainland an unfailing spring of purest water At ebb the Ray can only be reached from the old Roman causeway called the Strood over which runs the road from Colchester to Mersea Isle connecting formerly the city of the Trinobantes with the station of the count of the Saxon shore But even at ebb the Ray is not approachable by land unless the sun or east wind has parched the ooze into brick and then the way is long tedious and tortuous among bitter pools and over shining creeks It was perhaps because this ridge of high ground was so inaccessible so well protected by nature that the ancient inhabitants had erected on it a rather or fortified camp of wooden logs which left its name to the place long after the timber defences had rotted away
