Singular Null Hypersurfaces In General Relativity: Light-like Signals From Violent Astrophysical Events Peter A Hogan, Claude Barrabes, 2004-02-03 This book presents a comprehensive and self contained exposition of the mathematical theory of impulsive light like signals in general relativity Applications are provided in relativistic astrophysics cosmology and alternative theories of gravity deduced from string theory Cataclysmic astrophysical events give rise to impulsive light like signals which can generally be decomposed into a thin shell of null matter and an impulsive gravitational wave Several examples are considered in black hole physics wave collisions and light like boosts of compact gravitating sources Graduate students and researchers in relativistic astrophysics cosmology and string theory will find this book very useful Singular Null Hypersurfaces in General Relativity Claude Barrabes, Peter A. Interacting Gravitational, Electromagnetic, Neutrino And Other Waves: In The Context Of Einstein's General Theory Of Relativity Anzhong Wang, 2020-03-19 This book is devoted to researchers who would like to investigate interactions among gravitational waves and matter fields beyond linear order including the phenomena of memory effects gravitational Faraday rotation soft theorems and formations of spacetime singularities due to the mutual focus of gravitational waves Readers only require a basic understanding of general relativity to understand the materials The book starts with an overview on the fundamentals of the Newman Penrose formalism and a brief introduction to distribution theory with which the author systematically develops a mathematical description of spacetimes of colliding plane waves Then the author presents a frame independent definition of polarization of a plane gravitational wave in a curved spacetime studies in detail the gravitational Faraday rotation of two plane gravitational waves and shows that each of them can serve as a medium to the other precisely due to their nonlinear interactions Exact solutions are also presented which represent a variety of models including the collisions of two plane gravitational waves and the collisions of a plane gravitational wave with a dust shell a massless scalar wave an electromagnetic wave or a neutrino wave The formation of spacetime singularities due to nonlinear interactions and the effects of gravitational wave polarization on the nature of singularities are also explored
