

This was the first set of eggs that the duck had ever laid, and she was very pleased and proud. One day, when she saw tiny cracks in two of them, she drew the eggs closer to one another and didn't move for the rest of that day. She sat steadily on the nest for a whole night. Before she was gone, the five little eggs were empty, and five pairs of eyes were gazing out upon the green world.

"I suppose you are all here now?" said the mother as she moved up. "No, I have not got you all yet! The biggest egg is still there. How long is it going to take?" She settled herself on the nest again.
