Police and Community in Japan Walter L. Ames, 1979

The Japanese Police System Today L. Craig Parker, 2001-08-07 In all major categories of crime statistics show clearly that Japan has dramatically lower crime rates than the United States How can this be accounted for considering that Japan's population is as urbanized industrialized and sophisticated as those of the most advanced Western nations One of the major factors is the very different way that the Japanese police system is viewed and operates compared with police in the U S This study examines those differences through direct observation of Japanese police practices combines with interviews of Japanese police officials criminal justice practitioners legal scholars and private citizens Written by a teaching criminologist it compares many Japanese police practices side by side with U S police practices and places the role of the police in the broader cultural and historical Japanese framework SNI National Criminal Justice Reference Service (U.S.),1980

Ideas and Foreign Policy Judith Goldstein,Robert Owen Keohane,1993 Approaches the question of whether ideas world views principled beliefs and causal beliefs have an impact on political outcomes and if so under what conditions Contributions address such topics as the weight of ideas in decolonization human rights policies in the US and western Europe change in Parliament in early Stuart England and coping with terrorism Rethinking Community Policing in International Police Reform Deniz Kocak,2018-09-13 Community policing has often been promoted particularly in liberal democratic societies as the best approach to align police services with the principles of good security sector governance SSG The stated goal of the community policing approach is to reduce fear of crime within communities and to overcome mutual distrust between the police and the communities they serve by promoting police citizen partnerships This SSR Paper traces the historical origins of the concept of community policing in Victorian Great Britain and analyses the processes of transfer implementation and adaptation of approaches to community policing in Imperialand post war Japan Singapore and Timor Leste The study identifies the factors that were conducive or constraining to the establishment of community policing in each case It concludes that basic elements of police professionalism and local ownership are necessary preconditions for successfully implementing community policing according to the principles of good SSG Moreover external initiatives for community policing must be more closely aligned to the realities of the local context Japan Now ,1994
