Policing International Trade In Endangered Species The Cites Treaty And Compliance:

Policing International Trade in Endangered Species Rosalind Reeve, Sustainable Development Programme (Royal Institute of International Affairs), 2002 A comprehensive examination of the way in which the Convention on the International Trade in Endangered Species CITES is implemented and policed CITES is one of the oldest international environmental agreements and has been responsible for some striking conservation successes But given the way it has evolved there are also some critical weaknesses that unscrupulous countries and commercial interests can exploit especially regarding information institutions and enforcement The convention needs reform and this book gives a trenchant critique including practical and effective recommendations for change

Compliance Mechanisms Under Selected Multilateral Environmental Agreements Gregory Lawrence Rose, United Nations Environment Programme, 2007 This report seeks to perform a comparative analysis of compliance mechanisms under selected multilateral environment agreements MEAs It seeks to contribute to UNEP's work on implementation mechanisms for international instruments The report identifies strategic opportunities for interlinkages and synergies in compliance mechanisms among MEAs

Multilateral Environmental Agreements and Compliance Anna Huggins, 2017-11-27 The adoption of administrative procedures in global governance has the potential to foster proper consideration of marginalized actors interests yet risks entrenching the dominance of the well resourced and powerful Accordingly this book proposes a new framework for evaluating the extent to which administrative procedures in the compliance systems of multilateral environmental agreements constrain power and promote regard for the interests of affected states which are frequently developing and transition countries This framework is applied to the compliance systems under the Montreal Protocol the Kyoto Protocol and CITES which address critical global environmental issues of ozone layer depletion climate change and trade in endangered species respectively The analysis shows that under certain conditions administrative procedures limit the influence of states asymmetric power on compliance deliberations Furthermore systematic adoption of these procedures increases the opportunities for affected states interests to be voiced and considered in compliance decision making processes

The Convention on International Trade of Endangered Species Jonathan Liljeblad, 2014-01-14 Debates over U S government policy frequently follow a philosophy of devolution in authority from federal government to local government This concept opens the possibility of greater local involvement in national policy implementation and provides international treaties an opportunity to advance global policy by incorporating the efforts of local actors into their implementation framework Much of international policy involves enforcement through international to national linkages forming an implementation chain but devolution offers the potential to extend the implementation chain by providing national to local linkages This book explores the nature of such linkages taking as a case study the Convention on the International Trade in Endangered Species CITES via its domestic analog in the U S the Endangered Species Act ESA The analysis employs both quantitative and qualitative methods including interviews surveys statistical analysis and document review The author concludes that while the framework of CITES enforcement in the U S allows for national to local extension of the CITES implementation chain it also presents challenges that should be addressed by international policymakers who consider devolution as a way of assisting global policy The book includes a Foreword by Scott A Frisch a professor of political science and chair of the department at California State University Channel Islands Frisch notes that in this book Jonathan Liljeblad offers an enlightening and long overdue look at the issue of local implementation of international policy Liljeblad is able to arrive at insightful conclusions as well as concrete recommendations for policymakers wishing to improve coordination and execution of international policies that rely on local governments for their implementation He concludes Liljeblad s recommendations would foster a climate of greater understanding of the connections between international and domestic policy and should be heeded by all levels of government to remove unnecessary roadblocks that can derail implementation A new study in the international protection of animal and plant species presented by Quid Pro Books

Regulating International Trade in Wildlife David Morgan, 2025-10-03 The Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora CITES was one of the first in a new wave of global multilateral environmental agreements MEAs formed after the 1972 United Nations Conference on the Human Environment It is widely recognized as being one of the most successful biodiversity MEAs

Regulating International Trade in Wildlife 50 Years of the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora represents the first published history of the Convention to coincide with the 50th anniversary of its entry into force It examines the context under which the Convention was created and charts the development of its internal organization including its governing and intersessional bodies and its secretariat and the personalities that built them CITES business is about the conservation of species affected by international trade This book reviews the application of CITES to whales the African elephant crocodilians vicuña timber and tree species fish and other marine species The Convention s compliance framework is arguably its most pre eminent feature The book looks at the way that key obligations on Parties have been identified the standards of implementation set what efforts are made to help Parties comply with these and what sanctions are taken against Parties that fail to implement them Finally the author offers some personal reflections on the successes and failures of CITES based on his 40 years of engagement with the Convention and looks ahead to how it might develop in its second half century

Regulating International Trade in Wildlife 50 Years of the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora is of great interest to wildlife scientists including conservationists historians biologists as well as environmental scientists and non governmental organizations

FEATURES Tracks the history of the development of CITES its forerunners origins negotiation and entry into force Reviews the internal development of the Convention and its place in the wider debate about environmental security Is extensively referenced from primary research of the Convention s archives Offers incisive analysis of its successes and failures
