Belief and Religion in Barbarian Europe c. 350-700 Marilyn Dunn, 2013-11-28 This ground breaking study offers a new paradigm for understanding the beliefs and religions of the Goths Burgundians Sueves Franks and Lombards as they converted from paganism to Christianity between c 350 and c 700 CE Combining history and theology with approaches drawn from the cognitive science of religion Belief and Religion in Barbarian Europe uses both written and archaeological evidence to challenge many older ideas Beginning with a re examination of our knowledge about the deities and rituals of their original religions it goes on to question the assumption that the Germanic peoples were merely passive recipients of Christian doctrine arguing that so called Arianism was first developed as an entry level Christianity for the Goths Focusing on individual ethnic groupings in turn it presents a fresh view of the relationship between religion and politics as their rulers attempted to opt for Catholicism In place of familiar debates about post conversion pagan survivals contemporary texts and legislation are analysed to create an innovative cognitive perspective on the ways in which the Church endeavoured to bring the Christian God into people s thoughts and actions The work also includes a survey of a wide range of written and archaeological evidence contrasting traditional conceptions of death afterlife and funerary ritual with Christian doctrine and practice in these areas and exploring some of the techniques developed by the Church for assuaging popular anxieties about Christian burial and the Christian afterlife Politics and Society in Western Europe Jan-Erik

Müller,Paul W.

Thurner,2018-01-26 This volume investigates nuclear energy policies in Western Europe over the entire post war period but with special attention to the two most recent decades The comparative analytical perspective draws on the interplay between voters attitudes challenging movements party competition and coalition formation Spanning more than 60 years and 16 countries the researchers examine the underlying causal processes leading to the observed varieties of Western European nuclear energy policies Based on a mixed methods approach using both structured case studies as well as quantitative analyses the study shows that the nature of party competition under given institutional contexts is a key driver for as a rule tactically motivated governmental policy changes and stability respectively Part I introduces the practical and theoretical relevance of the topic It outlines the reasoning of the major scientific contributions with regard to nuclear energy policies and offers a theoretical alternative to the previous literatures that has been predominantly movements oriented Additionally it provides core economic and political indicators of the changing role of nuclear energy in the countries Part II consists of seven in depth case studies where the outlined theoretical perspective is applied Part III consists of a general summary short narratives of the countries not covered in case studies qualitative comparison and an assessment of the factors for policy change from multivariate analysis Telecommunications Policy-making in the European Union Joseph W.

Goodman, 2006-01-01 This book offers a good study of the development of telecommunications policy by the EU. Great value to those interested in understanding both European telecommunications policy and more generally in how policy making operates in the EU. Mark Thatcher, West European Politics. The book provides an interesting perspective on the evolution of nature of telecommunications policy making within the EU. As a consequence, the book should be of interest to telecommunications and politics government researchers alike. Jason Whalley, Communications Booknotes Quarterly. This well written book deals with the emergence and shaping of telecommunications policy in Europe with a particular focus on the time period of 1987-1998. This book fills an important gap, reviewing the initial formative years of European telecommunications policy development and liberalization in detail. The book captures the complicated and interdependent policy formation process in Europe in a credible and thoughtful way without falling into the trap of admiring critical personalities and key actors. The author has written an important and useful book which invites the research community to further explore the evolution of European telecommunications policy. Erik Bohlin, Communications Strategies. Examining the emergence of a European Union telecommunications policy. Joseph Goodman explains how and why the policy developed as it did and why certain reforms in the sector were easier to achieve than others. He provides a history of the key actors in the policy making process from the first attempts by the national postal telegraph and telecommunication administrations to coordinate their telecommunications policies in the 1950s to the implementation of a comprehensive EU telecommunications regulatory structure in 1998 and the development of a new regulatory structure in 2003. The analytical framework employed by the author draws upon new institutionalism and actor based approaches, providing an opportunity to evaluate the utility of a synthetic approach for examining and explaining EU policy making. The focus of his analysis is on the European Commission's two pronged strategy of liberalisation and harmonisation which began in the late 1980s and culminated in an important milestone on January 1st 1998 when the EU Member States fully opened their telecommunications markets to competition. He concludes that a synthetic approach which enables the researcher to apply a number of approaches to multiple settings and various levels of analysis is useful even necessary in understanding and explaining the many dimensions of EU policy making. This authoritative study will be of interest to all those in the telecommunications industry including attorneys, consultants and lobbyists who would like to know how the EU's policy developed. It will appeal more generally to political scientists and scholars of European history and politics.
