Democracy's Double-Edged Sword Catie Snow Bailard, 2014-09-22 As digital media becomes more omnipresent in our lives it becomes ever more important for political scientists and communication scholars to understand its influence on all aspects of the political process from campaigning to governance Catie Snow Bailard seeks to determine the Internet's influence on citizens' evaluations of their governments' performance particularly whether the Internet influences their satisfaction regarding the quality of democratic practices available in their nation While it is clearly important to understand how the Internet can streamline political organization once people are moved to action the discipline has afforded less attention to whether the Internet influences citizens at this more foundational antecedent stage of political action Bailard originates two theories for democratization specialists to consider mirror holding and window opening Mirror holding explores how accessing the Internet allows citizens to see a more detailed and nuanced view of their own government's performance dirty laundry and all Window opening on the other hand enables those same citizens to see how other governments perform in general particularly in comparison to their own The author offers a theory of the impact of Internet use on evaluations of government as well as tests of that theory at the country and individual levels based on survey data collected in 73 countries and two field experiments conducted in Bosnia Herzegovina and Tanzania The Web of Politics Richard Davis, 1999-03-04 Is the Internet destined to upset traditional political power in the United States This book answers with an emphatic no Author Richard Davis shows how current political players including candidates public officials and the media are adapting to the Internet and assuring that this new medium benefits them in their struggle for power In doing so he examines the current function of the Internet in democratic politics educating citizens conducting electoral campaigns gauging public opinion and achieving policy resolution and the roles of current political actors in those functions Davis s unconventional prediction concerning the Internet s impact on American politics warrants a closer look by anyone interested in learning how this new communication medium will affect us politically Processing Politics Doris A. Graber,2001-05

How often do we hear that Americans are so ignorant about politics that their civic competence is impaired and that the media are to blame because they do a dismal job of informing the public Integrating a broad range of research on how people learn this text shows that televised presentations at their best actually excel at transmitting information and facilitating learning The author critiques political offerings in terms of their compatibility with our learning capabilities and interests and she considers the obstacles both economic and political that affect the content we receive on the air on cable or on the Internet
