Subcommittee on Human Resources, 2001 An Assessment of the Privatization of Child Welfare Services Madelyn Freundlich, Sarah Gerstenzang, 2003 Many government bodies and policymakers have embraced privatization of child welfare services while others question whether privatization is truly more cost effective or provides the best services An Assessment of the Privatization of Child Welfare reports on six states efforts to privatize their child welfare systems and their varying levels of success This research documents the rich experiences of a variety of communities that have moved to private service delivery and will help child welfare practitioners everywhere understand what privatization can and cannot do to help them help children Book jacket

Supervision in Social Work Alfred Kadushin, Daniel Harkness, 2014-04-01 First published in 1976 Supervision in Social Work has become an essential text for social work educators and students detailing the state of the field and the place function and challenges of supervision in social work practice This fifth edition takes into account the sizable number of articles and books published on supervision since 2002 Changes in public health and social welfare policy have intensified concern about the social work supervision of licensed practitioners Tax and spending limitations at all levels of government combined with the unfolding effects of welfare reform and managed health care have increasingly emphasized the need for the efficient and accountable administration of health and social services in the private and public sectors This edition confronts issues raised by these developments including budgetary allocation and staff management the problems of worker burnout and safety the changing demographics and growing diversity of the supervising workforce evidence based and licensure supervision and performance appraisal

Human Services Contracting Robert A. Shick, Lawrence

Martin, 2019-12-10 In the last 35 years governments around the globe have increasingly contracted with nonprofit and for profit entities designed to provide a portion of the public sector's portfolio of goods and services. This trend can be traced to a variety of factors including perceived or actual economic efficiencies in outsourcing goods and services, values concerning the role and size of government in society, and the financial and organizational constraints of many government entities. In the United States, child welfare services adopted a pro contracting approach early, and a variety of other human services have followed suit, including mental health care, job training, homeless services, and others. Although there is strong evidence to suggest that human service contracting is growing over time, scholarship continues to lag on topics related to human service contract management, policy implementation, and innovation, performance based contracting, and evaluation. This new volume in the Public Solutions Handbook series is the first volume-length treatment of human services contracting issues, integrating both policy and practice, and exploring a broad range of issues that includes the fields of history, growth, innovations, results, and outcomes, best practices, and the future of government human service contracting. Chapters in this book examine specific human service contracts both in the U.S. and abroad, geared to practitioners in the public sector, from local government service contractors to municipal employees, as well as MPA students and those enrolled in courses on intergovernmental relations and nonprofit management.
