But what if our cities were actually shaped in response to dogs more than we ever realized Chris Pearson's Dogopolis boldly and convincingly asserts that human canine relations were a crucial factor in the formation of modern urban living Focusing on New York London and Paris from the early nineteenth century into the 1930s Pearson shows that human reactions to dogs significantly remolded them and other contemporary western cities It's an unalterable fact that dogs often filthy bellicose and sometimes off putting run away spread rabies defecate and breed wherever they like so as dogs became a more and more common in nineteenth century middle class life cities had to respond to people's fear of them and revulsion at their least desirable traits The gradual integration of dogs into city life centered on disgust at dirt fear of crime and vagrancy and the promotion of humanitarian sentiments On the other hand dogs are some people's most beloved animal companions and human compassion and affection for pets and strays were equally powerful forces in shaping urban modernity Dogopolis details the complex interrelations among emotions sentiment and the ways we manifest our feelings toward what we love showing that together they can actually reshape society
