A must read for fans of Michelle Alexander, Gilbert King, Elizabeth Hinton, and Kathleen Belew. Policing America's Educational Systems John Harrison Watts, 2019-06-11. Policing America's Educational Systems, edited by John Harrison Watts, describes methods of policing modern educational settings covering both K-12 public school and public or private colleges and universities. Using topical examples, subject matter experts introduce the history of policing in elementary and high schools, the legal context governing educational institutions, and ways to assess risk and prevent or respond to crime, including active shooter incidents. The opening section covers primary and secondary education, while the second focuses on postsecondary educational settings. A final section offers a theoretical approach to understanding campus crime and discusses the role of counseling and mental health in keeping students safe. A concluding chapter looks at the future of policing in education. Contributors bring both academic and practitioner experience to each topic covered, and useful features include learning objectives, chapter summaries, key terms, and discussion questions that further explore the issues and controversies covered in that section. This textbook is designed for courses in school or campus policing within criminal justice, social work, and sociology programs and is also appropriate for in-service training for professionals involved in school or campus policing and safety. Police Theory in America Robert C. Wadman, 2009. Measurement of effective policing is based on a quick response to crime that has already been committed; the value of crime prevention has become an afterthought in America's police departments. The middle chapters outline these issues and identify the strategies to improve police-community relationships and adjust the measurements for effective policing. The concluding chapters identify strategies designed to facilitate police department organizational change. Using terms from the discipline of economics, a micro strategy and a macro strategy are outlined. A new theory of policing concludes the book. The book is intended primarily as a textbook for criminal justice students, but it will also prove useful to police departments, police academies, city managers, and elected officials responsible for police administration and community safety. Crime and Justice, Volume 43 Michael Tonry, 2014-12-15. Violent and property crime rates in all Western countries have been falling since the early and mid-1990s, after rising in the 1970s and 1980s. Few people have noticed the common patterns, and fewer have attempted to understand or explain them. Yet the implications are essential for thinking about crime control and criminal justice policy more broadly. Crime rates in Canada and the United States, for example, have moved in parallel for 40 years, but Canada has neither increased its imprisonment rate nor adopted harsher criminal justice policies. The implication is that something other than mass imprisonment, zero tolerance policing, and three strikes laws explains why crime rates in our time are falling. The essays in this 43rd volume of Crime and Justice explore the possibilities cross-nationally. They document the common rises and falls in crime and look at possible explanations, including changes in sensitivity to violence generally and intimate violence in particular, macro-level changes in self-control, and structural and economic developments in modern states. The contributors to this volume include Marcelo Aebi Andromachi Tseloni Eric Baumer Manuel Eisner Graham Farrell Janne Kivivuori Tapio Lappi Seppä Suzy McElrath Richard Rosenfeld Rossella Selmini Nick Tilley and Kevin T Wolff
