Revolution Postponed Women In Contemporary China:

Revolution Postponed Margery Wolf, 1985-06-01 The Communist revolution promised Chinese women an end to thousands of years of subjugation an equality with men in all matters legal political social and economic This book examines the extent to which this promise has been kept Based on nearly a year of field research and interviews with over 300 women in six widely separated rural and urban areas it gives us a vivid picture of Chinese women today their day to day lives their views of the present and their hopes for the future To date nothing approximating equality has been achieved in working conditions in pay in educational opportunity In the cities and to a lesser extent in the countryside women are better off than in pre revolutionary China But nowhere except in the rhetoric of the regime are they equal to men Nor does the immediate future look much brighter given the continuing social constraints the government s controversial family limitation program and the nature of the new economic policies introduced in 1980 So far as possible the women interviewed are allowed to speak for themselves Some take refuge behind government slogans some are shy or wary but a surprising number are quick to give their own opinions despite an ever present government cadre These opinions combined with the author s astute observations on their local and national context add up to a wholly new perspective on an all too familiar problem
