New Nation, New Literature: Niugini

Vincent Eri, The Crocodile, Jacaranda Press (Pacific Writers Series), Brisbane, Australia, 1970, A$3.50; Peter Hastings, New Guinea: Problems and Prospects, Cheshire, Melbourne, 1969.

New Guinea was a British, and later an Australian, colony; 'Niugini' is the anticipation of a nation with its own cultural identity. Until the mid-sixties, the territory was neglected; Hastings summarizes: 'Other than economically and for the benefits of the whites, there was simply no intention to develop. The country was considered essential to Australia's defence' (p. 76). After the Australians were told by visiting UN and World Bank missions that a colonizing power should at least build up an infrastructure, they lost interest and are now preparing to hand over the government of the country to a very narrow stratum of évolués in 1976. Little is known of the country in the outside world; the books by Hastings (a historical account and critical assessment of colonial rule) and Ryan (with impressionistic chapters on both évolué and native life) help to close the gap.

Another approach to the understanding of an emerging nation is through its literature. One novel has been published so far, a mixture of ethnography, anti-colonial resentment, and a minimum of action so as to make it a 'novel'. It is Vincent Eri's The Crocodile. Admittedly, there is a hero: Hoiri, a young Papuan, whose growth from childhood to manhood is shown to us, in a highly condensed way, in the earlier chapters of the book. But the author picks Hoiri only to describe pre-World War II Papuan village life as a whole, and from this reviewer's professional point of view these chapters and supplementary data from the rest of the book could well be used in an undergraduate anthropology class to make the students translate the dialogues and descriptions into a systematic though sketchy ethnographic report. The students could cover types of settlement, economic pursuits, political organization, age groups, kinship, pre-marital and marital sex relations, socialization, value systems, religion (or what the author calls 'sorcery'), and all the rest, including the coming of social change under the impact

The Rise of Pacific Literature Matthew Hayward,Maebh Long,2024-09-03 In the 1960s and 1970s the staff and students of two newly founded universities in the Pacific Islands helped foster a golden age of Oceanian literature At the University of Papua New Guinea and the University of the South Pacific bold experiments in curriculum design recentered literary studies around a Pacific modernity Rejecting the established British colonial model writer scholars placed Pacific oratory and a growing body of Oceanian writing at the heart of the syllabus From this local core students ventured outward to contemporary postcolonial literatures where they saw modernist techniques repurposed for a decolonizing world Only then did they turn to foundational modernist texts encountered at last as a set of creative tools rather than a canon to be copied or learned by rote The Rise of Pacific Literature reveals the transformative role and radical adaptations of global modernisms in this golden age Maebh Long and Matthew Hayward examine the reading and teaching of Pacific oral narratives European and American modernisms and African Caribbean and Indian literature tracing how Oceanian writers appropriated and reworked key texts and techniques They identify the local innovations and international networks that spurred Pacific literature s golden age by reading crucial works against the poetry prose and plays on the syllabi of the new universities Placing internationally recognized writers such as Albert Wendt Subramani Konai Helu Thaman Marjorie Crocombe and John Kasaipwalova alongside lesser known authors of works published in Oceanian little magazines this book offers a wide ranging new account of Pacific literary history that tells a fresh story about modernism s global itineraries and transformations

Papua New Guinea Fraiser McConnell,1988 Pacific Islands Writing Michelle Keown,2007 Beginning with an overview of European representations of the Pacific Michelle Keown presents a broad ranging introduction to the postcolonial literatures of the Pacific from the late 1960s through to the new millennium focusing mainly on writing in English but also exploring the growing corpus of francophone and hispanophone Pacific writing Southeast Asia Journal ,1969 Routes and Roots Elizabeth DeLoughrey,2009-12-31 Elizabeth DeLoughrey invokes the cyclical model of the continual movement and rhythm of the ocean tidalectics to destabilize the national ethnic and even regional frameworks that have been the mainstays of literary study The result is a privileging of alter native epistemologies whereby island cultures are positioned where they should have been all along at the forefront of the world historical process of transoceanic migration and landfall The research determination and intellectual dexterity that infuse this nuanced and meticulous reading of Pacific and Caribbean literature invigorate and deepen our interest in and appreciation of island literature Vilsoni Hereniko University of Hawai i Elizabeth DeLoughrey brings contemporary hybridity diaspora and globalization theory to bear on ideas of indigeneity to show the complexities of native identities and rights and their grounded opposition as indigenous regionalism to free floating globalized cosmopolitanism Her models are instructive for all postcolonial readers in an age of transnational migrations Paul Sharrad University of Wollongong Australia Routes and Roots is the first comparative study of Caribbean and Pacific Island literatures and the first work to bring indigenous and diaspora literary studies together in a sustained dialogue Taking the tidalectic between land and sea as a dynamic starting point Elizabeth DeLoughrey foregrounds geography and history in her exploration of how island writers inscribe the complex relation between routes and roots The first section looks at the sea as history in literatures of the Atlantic middle passage and Pacific Island voyaging theorizing the transoceanic imaginary The second section turns to the land to examine indigenous epistemologies in nation building literatures Both sections are particularly attentive to the ways in which the metaphors of routes and roots are gendered exploring how masculine travelers are naturalized through their voyages across feminized lands and seas This methodology of charting transoceanic migration and landfall helps elucidate how theories and people travel positioning island cultures in the world historical process In fact DeLoughrey demonstrates how these tropical island cultures helped constitute the very metropolises that deemed them peripheral to modernity Fresh in its ideas original in its approach Routes and Roots engages broadly with history anthropology and feminist postcolonial Caribbean and Pacific literary and cultural studies It productively traverses diaspora and indigenous studies in a way that will facilitate broader discussion between these often segregated disciplines

Inside Out Vilsoni Hereniko, Rob Wilson, 1999-06-24 In a time of dynamism and contradiction in Pacific cultural production a time of turning things over and writing from the inside out this far reaching volume provides a comprehensive set of essays and interviews on the emergent literatures of the New Pacific With its dynamic combination of important position papers polemics and decolonizing critiques by noted authors and of analysis by new and established post colonial scholars this volume exposes the maze and mix of literatures and cultural identities breaking down and building up across the Pacific Ocean This pioneering work will be the definitive resource for anyone researching or teaching Pacific literature and will be invaluable for bringing Pacific culture to readers outside the region
