

A detailed anatomical illustration of a human skeleton, shown from the front. The skull is at the top, with the ribcage and spine visible. The pelvis and femurs (thigh bones) are prominent in the lower half. The hands are at the sides, and the feet are at the bottom. The skeleton is rendered in a realistic, shaded style, typical of 19th-century medical illustrations. It is centered on the page, with the title and author's name overlaid on it.
