of the United States, in order to secure domestic Tranquillity, provide for the common Defence, promote the general Welfare, and secure Posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

Article 1.

Section 1. All legislative Powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

Section 2. The House of Representatives shall be composed of Members chosen every second Year in each State, who shall have the Qualifications requisite for Electors of the most numerous Branch of the State Legislature.
No Person shall be a Representative who shall not have attained to the Age of twenty five Years, and seven Years, when elected, be an Inhabitant of that State in which he shall be chosen.

Representatives and direct Taxes shall be apportioned among the several States which may be included within this Union, which shall be determined by adding to the whole Number of free Persons, including those bound to Service, three fifths of all other Persons. The actual Enumeration shall be made within three Years after the first Meeting of the Congress, and within every subsequent Term of ten Years, in such Manner as they shall by Law direct. The Number of Representatives shall not exceed one for every thirty Thousand, but each State shall have at least one Representative, and until such Enumeration, there shall be one Representative for every free Person, and three fifths of a Slave, in each State.

When vacancies happen in the Representation from any State, the Executive Authority thereof shall issue Writs of Election to fill such Vacancies.
The House of Representatives shall choose their Speaker and other Officers; and shall have the sole Power of Impeachment.
Section 3. The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, and

Population Policy And The U S Constitution:

Population Policy and the U.S. Constitution L.D. Barnett, 2013-03-09 A few decades ago a monograph on the legal aspects of population control would have looked mainly at legal prohibitions. The salient legal problems were restriction of the use of birth control and dissemination of information about it. The assumption in such an approach would have been that effective population control is legally affected only by the clearly stated restrictions in the law. In other respects the law could be assumed to be neutral. Judicial and legislative changes have eliminated practically all restrictions on the means of contraception. This development however has not freed population from its relation to the law; on the contrary it has exposed the importance of law as a motivating force for and against population control. Although much applied work in population control is directed toward the distribution of contraceptives, concentration on the means of population control has shown itself to be of doubtful value. From many sides the primary importance of motivation has been recognized along with the need to influence motivation and to analyze the conditions under which motivational change is possible. At this point the role of the law is apparent along with the recognition that law has not been neutral in this issue; that in fact it cannot be neutral. Larry Barnett has undertaken a pioneering effort in identifying the areas of law important to changing people's motivations in regard to population control and to a reduction in individual family size.

The U.S. Constitution and Constitutionalism in Africa Kenneth W. Thompson, 1990-01-30

More perhaps than any other world region Africa is a living laboratory for observing the interrelation between American European and African ideas of constitutionalism In the post World War II era America sought to bring freedom and self determination to Africa in what we considered a correction of the policies of the European colonial powers The one exception which prevented Americans from claiming to be wholly anticolonial was Libya Elsewhere we saw our goals as convergent with those of Africans and therefore likely to contribute to their political and constitutional growth Africans saw us not only as anticolonial but domestically racist as internationally espousing aims coinciding with theirs but domestically acting in ways antithetical to their values One way or another Americans influenced African developments whether by example or by failure to practice what we preached In either case Africa embraced ideas such as national self determination and racial equality which Americans had professed It is within this broader context that the contributors to this volume have approached constitutionalism
