Lucifer y el pavo real: un simbolismo coincidente en la pintura renacentista del Norte de Europa = Lucifer and the peacock: a coincident symbolism in Renaissance painting in northern Europe Esperanza ARAGONÉS

ESTELLA,2020-05-01 The demons like the higher angels that they were are clothed with iconographic details that remind us of the peacock such as the crest on its head its characteristic wings and above all the blue skin colouring which reminds us of the characteristic colour of this bird The use of peacock symbology comes about in an artistic period the Renaissance in which there is an abundance of iconography referring to the fall of the rebellious angels which harps on the motive of disobedience In the same way that the peacock is the most beautiful bird in Paradise Lucifer is the most beautiful of the angels and both because of their attractiveness represent the pride and vanity which caused the fall of the devil That colour clothing also identifies the fallen angel with a cherubim portrayed with the colour blue in art in contrast to the red colouring appropriate to the seraphim who faced with the revolt of their fellows remained faithful to God and custodians of Paradise The physical attractiveness of the devil which goes back to the new vision of the devil in the 16th c emphasising his beauty and the increasingly more frequent link between pride and luxury and conceit By influencing the beauty of Lucifer and artistic and literary trend will begin that will derive in the romantic attractiveness of the devil The iconography of Lucifer portrayed as a peacock lives on in the 20th c in a religious community in the mountains of Irak We are talking of the Yazidi of Lalish who adore an angel who disobeyed his Creator for which he was condemned to Hell Once there his tears of repentance extinguished the flames of Hell leading to his being forgiven and raised to the position of God's representative on Earth He is called Melek Taus and is portrayed as a very beautiful peacock its main colour is being blue sacred in that creed and hence exclusive to that divinity El hogar ,1914
