A Clash of Paradigms: Response and Development in the South Pacific Suan Maiava, 2024-11-01 This title was first published in 2001 This study indicates that researchers have far to go in understanding and assessing how development projects work The author shows that often the perception of failure is not shared by those whom were intended to benefit She uses a case study of Samoan villagers introduced to cattle farming to examine the wider development process and challenge the conventional theories By drawing on people centred perspectives that give much greater weight to the role of culture in development the volume does not simply criticize development project management but suggests practical and positive ways forward encouraging spontaneous indigenous development which should be supported by projects where appropriate

Development Alan Bicker,Johan Pottier,Paul Sillitoe,2003-12-16 Development has too often failed to deliver on its promises to poor nations The policies imposed from above by international agencies and state bodies have frequently not met the needs and aspirations of ordinary people Development agencies have been searching for sometime for alternative approaches One of those being pioneered is indigenous knowledge which aims to make local voices heard more effectively However while it is increasingly acknowledged in development contexts it is yet to be validated and accepted by anthropologists It is self evident to any anthropologist that effective development assistance will benefit from some understanding of local knowledge and practices This therefore puts anthropology and anthropologists at the centre of development This volume focuses on two major issues that anthropology might profitably address First of all how to define indigenous knowledge and who should define it as it currently lacks disciplinary coherence Secondly once this definition is achieved what methodologies should be used in such an interdisciplinary research endeavour when it must meet the demands of development cost and time effective intelligible to non experts while not compromising anthropological expectations The new opportunities and their methodological implications are addressed in the chapters of this book in a range of ethnographic and institutional contexts and demonstrate how wide reaching and how crucially important this debate has become Participating in Development is a thought provoking and challenge collection Its authors both define and validate the role of the anthropologist in development as well of development in anthropology Environment and Resettlement Politics in China Gørild Heggelund,2017-07-05 The Three Gorges dam currently being constructed on the Yantgze River in China is controversial both inside and outside China due to the population in the area and the environmental impacts Using material previously unavailable in any Western language it analyses the Chinese discussion and policy making for the resettlement process It also discusses the development aspects of resettling such a large population officially 1 2 million as well as assessing the actual and potential impact of resettlement on this population Nomadic Societies in the Middle East and North Africa Dawn Chatty,2018-11-12 A scholarly volume devoted to an understanding of contemporary nomadic and pastoral societies in the Middle East and North Africa This volume recognizes the variable mobile quality of the ways of life of these societies which persist in accommodating the nation state of the 20th and 21st century but remain firmly transnational and highly adaptive Composed of four sections around the theme of contestation it includes examinations of contested authority and power space and social transformation development and economic transformation and cultures and engendered spaces Facing Hazards and Disasters National Research Council,Division on Earth and Life Studies,Committee on Disaster Research in the Social Sciences: Future Challenges and Opportunities,2006-09-10 Social science research conducted since the late 1970 s has contributed greatly to society s ability to mitigate and adapt to natural technological and willful disasters However as evidenced by Hurricane Katrina the Indian Ocean tsunami the September 11 2001 terrorist attacks on the United States and other recent events hazards and disaster research and its application could be improved greatly In particular more studies should be pursued that compare how the characteristics of different types of events including predictability forewarning magnitude and duration of impact affect societal vulnerability and response This book includes more than thirty recommendations for the hazards and disaster community The Community Forests of Mexico David Barton Bray,Leticia Merino-Pérez,Deborah Barry,2009-03-16 Mexico leads the world in community management of forests for the commercial production of timber Yet this success story is not widely known even in Mexico despite the fact that communities around the globe are increasingly involved in managing their own forest resources To assess the achievements and shortcomings of Mexico's community forest management programs and to offer approaches that can be applied in other parts of the world this book collects fourteen articles that explore community forest management from historical policy economic ecological sociological and political perspectives The contributors to this book are established researchers in the field as well as many of the important actors in Mexico's nongovernmental organization sector Some articles are case studies of community forest management programs in the states of Michoacán Oaxaca Durango Quintana Roo and Guerrero Others provide broader historical and contemporary overviews of various aspects of community forest management As a whole this volume clearly establishes that the community forest sector in Mexico is large diverse and has achieved unusual maturity in doing what communities in the rest of the world are only beginning to explore how to balance community income with forest conservation In this process Mexican communities are also managing for sustainable landscapes and livelihoods
