Quality Day Care A Handbook Of Choices For Parents And Caregivers:

Quality Day Care Richard C. Endsley, Marilyn R. Bradbard, 1981 Handbook of Parenting Marc H.

Bornstein, 2005-02-16 Completely revised and expanded from four to five volumes this new edition of the Handbook of Parenting appears at a time that is momentous in the history of parenting. Parenting and the family are today in a greater state of flux, question and redefinition than perhaps ever before. We are witnessing the emergence of striking permutations on the theme of parenting: blended families, lesbian and gay parents, and teen versus fifties first-time moms and dads. One cannot but be awed on the biological front by technology that now not only renders postmenopausal women capable of childbearing but also presents us with the possibility of designing babies. Similarly on the sociological front, single parenthood is a modern-day fact of life; adult child dependency is on the rise, and parents are ever less certain of their own roles even in the face of rising environmental and institutional demands that they take increasing responsibility for their offspring. The Handbook of Parenting concerns itself with different types of parents: mothers and fathers, single adolescent and adoptive parents, basic characteristics of parenting behaviors, knowledge, beliefs, and expectations about parenting, forces that shape parenting, evolution, genetics, biology, employment, social class, culture, environment, and history, problems faced by parents, handicap, marital difficulties, drug addiction, and practical concerns of parenting: how to promote children's health, foster social adjustment, and cognitive competence, and interact with school, legal, and public officials. Contributors to the Handbook of Parenting have worked in different ways toward understanding all these diverse aspects of parenting, and all look to the most recent research and thinking in the field to shed light on many topics every parent wonders about. Each chapter addresses a different but central topic in parenting; each is rooted in current thinking and theory as well as classical and modern research in that topic; each has been written to be read and absorbed in a single sitting. In addition, each chapter follows a standard organization including an introduction to the chapter as a whole, followed by historical considerations of the topic, a discussion of central issues and theory, a review of classical and modern research, forecasts of future directions of theory and research, and a set of conclusions. Of course, contributors' own convictions and research are considered, but contributions to this new edition present all major points of view and central lines of inquiry and interpret them broadly. The Handbook of Parenting is intended to be both comprehensive and state of the art. As the expanded scope of this second edition amply shows, parenting is naturally and closely allied with many other fields.

Quality in Early Childhood Programs

Gwen Morgan, 1985

This policy paper includes four perspectives on educational quality presented at the 1983 annual meeting of the National Association for the Education of Young Children. Gwen Morgan considers the role of government, raising questions about what regulatory agencies should do, can do, and cannot do in the light of public attitudes. Ways that practitioners can provide high-quality and developmentally appropriate services are the focus of Nancy Curry's presentation, while the process by which parents consumers can be helped to better choose among the options provided is discussed by Richard Endsley and Marilyn Bradbard Finally suggestions for ways researchers can best contribute to the field s knowledge about the determinants of good quality early childhood experiences are presented by Hakim Rashid In an introductory overview the main points raised in each of the presentations are briefly summarized the concluding section synthesizes ideas and recurring themes that can serve as useful guides to the reader Included is a definition of quality espoused by the High Scope Foundation which has three integral components 1 a developmentally based curriculum 2 staff training and supervision and 3 ongoing evaluation
