Wagner,2014-08-29 This comprehensive and up to date review of learning and educational quality in developing countries written by 16 highly knowledgeable specialists from around the world provides policymakers and researchers accessible perspectives with the Millennium Development Goals in mind

Education Reform and the Learning Crisis in Developing Countries Prema Clarke,2022-09-15 Over three decades ago international donors declared that there was a learning crisis in developing countries In the years since large investments have been made towards education yet there has been an apparent relative lack of progress in student learning This book unpicks this disparity and explores the implications of evidence based donor programming for quality education It undertakes an in depth analysis of the interventions financed by the main donors in primary education such as infrastructure development provision of instructional material teacher training and community mobilization and argues that the research undertaken during this period was unable to provide answers The author outlines an alternative model for evidence generation that can assist in the design of relevant and targeted interventions for learning to ultimately inform and improve future education programmes Timely and radical this book is essential reading for researchers and students in the fields of education research and education reform

Measuring Education Inequality in Developing Countries Nichole Torpey-Saboe,2018-06-19 This book constructs a measure of education inequality using time series cross national data and utilizes real world examples based on author interviews It provides insights into how classic trade theory might be applied more broadly to generate expectations not only about income distribution but also about investment in human capital The project explores the ways in which global trends toward urbanization and democratization might be expected to impact education inequality The author addresses contemporary issues in politics such as growing income inequality the backlash against globalization and free trade and concerns that democratic institutions are elite dominated and unresponsive to the needs of common citizens

Strategies for Sustainable Transformation of Developing Countries Mark Izevbekhai,2015-12-11 Strategies for the Sustainable Transformation of Developing Countries attempts a holistic solution approach through sustainable development concepts and principles to address challenges in developing countries. In fact, the book is the application of sustainable development and thus it offers strategies that could be applied to the development and transformation of social, economical and environmental dimensions of society using the example of Nigeria, a developing country in West Africa. The book is divided into five parts covering critical subjects of development which include education, government and good governance, community security, leadership and community development. It provides answers to how sustainable development can bring change and benefits to these subject matters within the context of developing countries using Nigeria as an example. This book is very different from many other books written on the challenges of development, particularly on African countries, in the sense that it gives priority to solutions and mapping them out in a feasible, sustainable and practical way. The cornerstone of the book is the emphatic suggestion of a national transition initiative programme and Sustainable Community development Programme to drive sustainable development from the top and the bottom of society respectively.

Policy-Making for Education Reform in Developing Countries William K. Cummings, James H. Williams, 2008-08-15. Policy Making for Education Reform in Developing Countries aims at helping policymakers in developing countries better understand the processes and strategies for education reform and the policy options available to them. This text focuses on the content of reform options and strategies for achieving educational improvement at different levels of the system, e.g. primary, secondary, tertiary, for different sub-sectors, e.g. management, teachers, and for different purposes with which education systems are tasked, e.g. reaching peripheral groups of students, linking youth and employment. A holistic approach is increasingly recognized as essential to realizing the promises of education for the development of social and human capital, innovation in a global economy, sustained economic growth, social harmony and greater civic participation, decreased achievement gaps and increased equity.

Rural School Improvement in Developing Countries Yuchi Zhao, Jing Liu, 2024-09-06. This open access book examines the rural school improvement programs implemented in four developing countries including China, Myanmar, Uganda and Kenya. It analyzes research questions such as problems faced by rural schools in these countries, approaches or models adopted to improve these rural schools, specific interventions to address the problems and their effectiveness and lessons learnt from these programs. It serves as a useful reference for researchers and policy makers interested in the field of rural education improvement.

GIS and Machine Learning for Small Area Classifications in Developing Countries Adegbola Ojo, 2020-12-30. Since the emergence of contemporary area classifications, population geography has witnessed a renaissance in the area of policy-related spatial analysis. Area classifications subsume geodemographic systems which often use data mining techniques and machine learning algorithms to simplify large and complex bodies of information about people and the places in which they live, work and undertake other social activities. Outputs developed from the grouping of small geographical areas on the basis of multi-dimensional data have proved beneficial, particularly for decision making in the commercial sectors of a vast number of countries in the northern hemisphere This book argues that small area classifications offer countries in the Global South a distinct opportunity to address human population policy related challenges in novel ways using area based initiatives and evidence based methods This book exposes researchers practitioners and students to small area segmentation techniques for understanding interpreting and visualizing the configuration dynamics and correlates of development policy challenges at small spatial scales It presents strategic and operational responses to these challenges in cost effective ways Using two developing countries as case studies the book connects new transdisciplinary ways of thinking about social and spatial inequalities from a scientific perspective with GIS and Data Science This offers all stakeholders a framework for engaging in practical dialogue on development policy within urban and rural settings based on real world examples Features The first book to address the huge potential of small area segmentation for sustainable development combining explanations of concepts a range of techniques and current applications Includes case studies focused on core challenges that confront developing countries and provides thorough analytical appraisal of issues that resonate with audiences from the Global South Combines GIS and machine learning methods for studying interrelated disciplines such as Demography Urban Science Sociology Statistics Sustainable Development and Public Policy Uses a multi method approach and analytical techniques of primary and secondary data Embraces a balanced chronological and well sequenced presentation of information which is very practical for readers

Low-fee Private Schooling and Poverty in Developing Countries Joanna Härmä, 2021-01-14 In Low fee Private Schooling and Poverty in Developing Countries Joanna Härmä draws on primary research carried out in sub Saharan African countries and in India to show how the poor are being failed by both government and private schools The primary research data and experiences are combined with additional examples from around the world to offer a wide perspective on the issue of marketized education low fee private schooling and government systems Härmä offers a pragmatic approach to a divisive issue and an ideologically driven debate and shows how the well intentioned international drive towards education for all is being encouraged and even imposed long before some countries have prepared the teachers and developed the systems needed to implement it successfully Suggesting that governments need to take a much more constructive approach to the issue Härmä argues for a greater acceptance of the challenges abandoning ideological positions and a scaling back of ambition in the hope of laying stronger foundations for educational development

Competition Law in Developing Countries Thomas K. Cheng, 2020-05-27 This book brings together perspectives of development economics and law to tackle the relationship between competition law enforcement and economic development It addresses the question of whether and how competition law enforcement helps to promote economic growth and development This question is highly pertinent for developing countries largely because many developing countries have only adopted competition law in recent years about thirty jurisdictions had in place a competition law in the early 1980s and there are now more than 130 competition law regimes across the world of which many are developing countries The book proposes a customized approach to competition law enforcement for developing countries set against the background of the academic and policy debate concerning convergence of competition law The implicit premise of convergence is that there may exist one or a few correct approaches to competition law enforcement which in most cases emanate from developed jurisdictions that are applicable to all This book rejects this assumption and argues that developing countries ought to tailor competition law enforcement to their own economic and political circumstances In particular it suggests how competition law enforcement can better incorporate development concerns without causing undue dilution of its traditional focus on protecting consumer welfare It proposes ways in which approaches to competition law enforcement need to be adjusted to reflect the special economic characteristics of developing country economies and the more limited enforcement capacity of developing country competition authorities Finally it also addresses the long running debate concerning the desirability and viability of industrial policy for developing countries The author would like to acknowledge the Research Grants Council of Hong Kong for its generous support The work in this book was fully supported by a grant from the Research Grants Council of Hong Kong Project No HKU 742412H

Disability, Education and Employment in Developing Countries Kamal Lamichhane, 2015-01-15 With several empirical evidences this book advocates on the importance of human capital of persons with disabilities and demands the paradigm shift from charity into investment approach Society in general believes that people with disabilities cannot benefit from education cannot participate in the labour market and cannot be contributing members to families and countries To invalidate such assumptions this book describes how education in particular helps make persons with disabilities achieve economic independence and social inclusion For the first time detailed analyses of returns to the investment in education and nexus between disability education employability and occupational options are discussed Moreover other chapters describe disability and poverty followed by the discussion of barriers behind why persons with disabilities are unable to obtain education despite the significantly higher returns These foundational themes recur throughout the book

Education and International Development Clive Harber, 2014-05-05 This book is a comprehensive introductory text for those beginning their studies of the complex yet fascinating area of education and international development It sets out an overview of the main theories ideologies and issues of education in developing countries always with an eye to the contextual and practical realities of life in schools and other educational institutions The book takes a balanced yet critical approach and examines both positive and negative aspects of the many relationships between education and development It will be of use to undergraduate master s and doctoral students as well as to staff in higher education who teach on courses concerned with education and development and those who work in international institutions and non governmental organisations
