

From the Introduction by J. H. Plumb

For the student of the history of the world, there is no more useful book than this. It is a book of the history of the world, not of the history of the world as it is seen from the point of view of the student of the history of the world. It is a book of the history of the world, not of the history of the world as it is seen from the point of view of the student of the history of the world. It is a book of the history of the world, not of the history of the world as it is seen from the point of view of the student of the history of the world.

By Donald R. Dudley

A panoramic view of the political, economic, military, and social institutions of Rome, upon which many of our own are founded, and of her art, architecture, literature, and religion, from prehistoric times to the death of Constantine. In the series of which this volume is a part, distinguished historians trace the course of human society from its beginnings to the atomic age.
