An economic metamorphosis and an invasion of Western culture have created a dynamic environment for architecture and construction both at the public and the domestic scale. This push to prosperity has excited architects from around the globe who have seen a unique opportunity to produce remarkable and innovative designs. New China Architecture seizes this moment in time. It documents both the stunning designs of famed architects and the emergence of a whole new generation of Chinese architects. The selected projects cover a broad range of residential homes, public buildings, office towers, and the adaptive reuse of older city precincts. The buildings featured include skyscrapers in Shanghai, the dazzling new designs for the Beijing Olympic Games venues, innovative private houses such as those at the Commune by the Great Wall, and the now mandatory gleaming new airports and city landmarks.

Shanghai Peter G. Rowe, Seng Kuan, 2004. The rise of Shanghai over the past decade is a story of superlatives. The city's skyline has been totally transformed. It now boasts some of the world's tallest buildings and longest bridges. A History of Design Institutes in China Charlie Q. L. Xue, Guanghui Ding, 2018-07-11. A History of Design Institutes in China examines the intricate relationship between design institutes, the state, and in later periods, the market economy through a carefully situated discussion of significant theoretical and historical issues, including socialist utopia, collective and individual design, structural transformation, and architectural exportation, amongst others. It shows how, over the past six decades, China's design institutes have served the state's strategy for socialist construction and urbanisation to create socioeconomic and cultural value. Through first-hand research, authors Xue and Ding reveal how the tensions between pragmatism, creativity, collaboration, and resistance have played a crucial role in defining architectural production. Appealing to academics, researchers, and graduate students, this book provides a much-needed contribution to the discourse on architectural history, building practices, and policymaking in contemporary China.
