The Exploitation of East Africa, 1856-1890 Sir Reginald Coupland, 2017-02-07 Originally published in 1939 this broad history of East Africa down to its partition in 1885 1990 forms the third volume in Reginald Coupland's study of East Africa in the nineteenth century following on from Kirk on the Zambesi 1928 and East Africa and Its Invaders 1938 This latest instalment is divided into two parts the first describes the overthrow of the slave trade based on Zanzibar The second and longer part is concerned again with the Invaders of East Africa the Europeans who divided the country up into spheres of influence protectorates and colonies for themselves Though Kirk no longer appears in the title of the book he is its leading figure working patiently and in the end victoriously to compass the destruction of the slave trade then working no less patiently but this time without success for a British protectorate over the Sultanate of Zanzibar and the whole of East Africa Coupland shows us very plainly that in this instance exploitation was often accompanied by well directed and constructive idealism It remained his firm conviction that the destruction of the slave trade was an essential pre requisite of orderly evolution in the twentieth century Jack Simmons Sins of Our Ancestors Collection: Marked, Suppressed, and Redeemed Bridget E.
