in light of the phenomenon of dreamless sleep supplements Husserl's analyses of subjectivity through integrating interruptions into the life of consciousness and establishes a new phenomenological concept of subjectivity that is a fractured subject. In analyzing the phenomenon of dreamless sleep the author develops a new theory of the body namely the sleeping body and explains the importance of the lived body in the experience and constitution of time. The author analyzes the moments of falling asleep and waking up as well as the period of dreamless sleep and shows that a more complete phenomenological concept of subjectivity requires attention to the interweaving of continuity and discontinuity. This project therefore aims to provide a critical counterpart to Husserl's analyses by developing his transcendental phenomenology into a phenomenology of interruptions. Through this account of dreamless sleep this text shows furthermore that subjectivity ceases to perceive and experience the flow of time through retention, protention and the primal impression and that the time that is not lived through during this period is lost time. Moreover it explores the methodological consequences of interruptions for phenomenology and shows that phenomenology reaches its limits in the phenomena of dreamless sleep because it is incapable of fully accessing or accounting for them through the phenomenological reduction.

Contemporary Authors, 2005. LIFEBOAT AESTHETICS PHILLIP BALDWIN, 2016-06-30. A good rationality. The only rationality. These rooms are designed and efficient when stacked against others. When stacked against themselves they appeared to be curved or at least they could be curved. What would that do to our consciousness? If they exist as curved rooms. Could we see the patterns emerging after they exist as blips upon the EEG memory? What about the pundits who have designed and built them for us? They are looking for the regular within the regular. Standardizing the working class soul. I passed by the clay matrons and they work in circles always circles. They try to complete the mistakes that the machine put them into orbits. Especially at a time they should break from orbits. Moving forward the text emerges towards the self using a machine. What can we do over. And then in an OCD effort the obsessive compulsive effort circularity just a center of there being. And they're being is one of unhappiness. Time to cut the trajectory the gravitational pull of the mistake.

The Mindful Parent Charlotte Peterson, 2015-11-17. Over the last four decades American hospitals have seen a steady increase in children suffering from psychological disorders, peer violence and suicide attempts. To figure out why this is happening and how to put an end to it child psychologist Dr. Charlotte Peterson has been spending six months every five years living in indigenous villages and observing their parenting practices. What she's found is that the people of peaceful cultures particularly the Tibetan, Bhutanese and Balinese people know something we Westerners despite our modernity don't and their children are happier, healthier and more balanced because of it. What Dr. Peterson has found is that the children in these cultures are raised with a high degree of cherishing and empathy. Attachments are promoted by intensive nurturing of infants and gentle, clear limit setting with toddlers that teaches self control and builds self esteem. The result as Dr. Peterson has found after visiting these places again and again is children who are trusting, enjoyable and kind, not spoiled as we might imagine. The Mindful Parent brings together Dr Peterson's village interviews observations research and over thirty five years of work as a psychologist to teach modern parents how to raise healthier more well balanced and kinder children It includes creative ideas from parents who are currently adopting these practices and balancing other aspects of their personal career and financial responsibilities to assure their children get the support they need to thrive Midland Schools ,1897 The World's Work ,1917
