addresses the power relations underpinning the production of academic knowledge presents a range of qualitative data collection methods which confront the field's dominant post-positivist approaches foregrounds the emotional dynamics of research relations and explores the personal, the political and the situated nature of research journeys The book has been divided into two parts with the essays in the first part establishing a context-specific framework for engaging philosophical and theoretical debates in contemporary tourism enquiry The second set of essays then present, discuss and critique specific methodologies, research techniques, methods of interpretation and writing strategies all of which are in some sense illustrative of critical tourism research Contributors range from postgraduate students to established academics and are drawn from both the geopolitical margins and the powerbases of the tourism academy Their various relationships with the English-speaking academy thus range from relative outsider to well-positioned insider and as a result their essays are reflective of a range of locations within the complexly spun web of academic power relations and social divisions

Fieldwork in Tourism Michael C. Hall, 2010-10-04 The inherent mobility of tourists and consequent relative ephemerality of contact between the visitor and the visited tourism phenomenon have specific characteristics that challenge the usual fieldwork practices of the social and physical sciences Such conditions create specific concerns for the tourism researcher in terms of their positionality, relationality, accessibility, ethics, reflexivity and methodological appropriateness Fieldwork in Tourism is the first book to focus on this extremely significant component of contemporary tourist research and provides hands-on approaches to conducting tourism fieldwork in a range of settings exploring the methodological considerations and offering strategies to mitigate these The book also discusses how fieldwork affects researchers personally and what happens to field relationships Divided into five sections each with an introduction and a guide to further reading the chapters cover the context of fieldwork research relationships politics and power the position of the researcher in the field research methods and processes including virtual fieldwork and the relationships between being a tourist and doing fieldwork The concluding chapter suggests that the link between tourism and fieldwork perhaps offers greater insights into understanding creative fieldwork than may be imagined This book incorporates a rich and diverse set of fieldwork experiences insights and reflections on conducting fieldwork in different settings the problems that emerge the solutions that were developed and the realities of being in the field Fieldwork in Tourism is an essential guide for Tourism higher level students academics and researchers embarking on research in this field Philosophical Issues in Tourism John Tribe, 2009-03-19 Despite the geometric expansion of tourism knowledge some areas have remained stubbornly underdeveloped and a full or comprehensive consideration of the philosophical issues of tourism represents one such significant knowledge gap A key aim of this book therefore is to provide an initial mapping of and fresh insights into this territory In doing so it discusses key philosophical questions in the field such as What is tourism Who is a tourist What is wisdom What is it to know something What is the nature of reality Why are some destinations considered beautiful Why is tourism desirable What is good and bad tourism What are desirable ends These and similar topics are addressed this book under the headings of truth beauty and virtue The Role of Quantitative and Qualitative Research in Tourism Brian Davies, 2001
