

Steps to Prepare for the Quality Assurance Act

The Quality Assurance Act brings drastic changes to the Dutch construction landscape. Therefore, it's essential to prepare in advance to get familiar with the new system, know your roles as a contractor, and avoid disruption in your processes.

Here are the crucial steps you should take:

A. Conducting a Readiness Assessment

A thorough assessment of your quality assurance systems and processes is vital to gauge your readiness for and adaptability to the new laws.

You need to revisit your company's definition of quality. This includes revising your quality statements and expectations to align with the new laws. Be sure to document the new definitions and make them accessible to everyone in your team, including suppliers and subcontractors.

Assess your system for planning, designing, and development of plans. In this case, you'll need to use Building Information Modeling

(BIM) technology to create a shared knowledge resource for all stakeholders. The BIM can help with quality control checks to ensure adherence to set standards.

Communication is essential in quality management, so you'll need to assess your existing channels and tools for communication. All project participants must be connected through a single platform to ensure efficient communication and collaboration.

B. Developing a Compliance Strategy

In the Netherlands, all construction projects must adhere to the Dutch Building Decree (Bouwbesluit 2012), local by-laws, and the Gas Act amendment. The decree provides the requirements for health, safety, usability, energy efficiency, and the environment.

Globalization has developed a powerful impact on the development of higher education and imposes new challenges for the organization standards financing regulations Systems of higher education tend to detach from the national models and adopt a more global orientation The implementation of quality assurance is one of the recent and most decisive transformations of higher education Different higher education systems are trying to develop assessment tools internal and external to improve the quality of teaching research and extension activities and these are either based on experiences of selected countries or are extensively country specific The quality assurance procedures that were often dependent on national directorial traditions have gradually tended to converge and led to a setup of common tools and standards Countries under a centralized system tend to impose a uniform and general model while decentralized systems give greater freedom to universities to set up their own quality International rankings of universities also contribute to impose a set of transnational standards and values which is also being considered as indicative by the stakeholders The present book tries to look at the quality assurance mechanism international rankings and its impact in both absolute and comparative fashion in context of 11 countries from different parts of the world

Higher Education Quality Assurance in Sub-Saharan Africa Peter Nicolas Materu, 2007 This report assesses the status and practice of higher education quality assurance in Sub Sahara Africa focusing on degree granting tertiary institutions A main finding is that structured national level quality assurance processes in African higher education are a very recent phenomenon and that most countries face major capacity constraints Only about a third of them have established structured national quality assurance mechanism often only as recently as during the last ten years Activities differ in their scope and rigor ranging from simple licensing of institutions by the minister responsible for higher education to comprehensive system wide program accreditation and ranking of institutions Within institutions of higher learning self assessment and academic audits are gradually being adopted to supplement traditional quality assurance methods However knowledge about and experience with self assessments are limited The main challenges to quality assurance system in Africa are cost and human capacity requirements For countries with large tertiary systems the report recommends institutional rather than program accreditation as a cost effective option However where tertiary systems are small and underdeveloped a less formal self assessment for each institution may be necessary until the capacity could be strengthened to support a more formal national quality assurance agency in the long run
