Quality Care For Elderly People:

Quality care for elderly people Edward J. Dickinson, Peter P. Mayer, Martin Sandler, 2013-11-11 This book is all about improving the health care of elderly people which is facing unprecedented challenges in the 1990s. Energies need to be concentrated in three main areas: the development of high quality care in community settings, the future role of specialized hospital services, and the way that long term care is delivered. All of these are interconnected and success with any of them depends on successful relationships. For example, success in community care requires working interfaces with primary care, the private sector, and hospital care. These interfaces are not static but comprise dynamic interactions between people in different teams with different backgrounds, training, perspectives, and interests. What people do is influenced strongly by the organizations they work for. These inescapable facts lead us to the structure of this book. By concentrating on sectors, people, and organizations we hope to deal with all the important relationships in a coherent way. Yet this book is not intended to be from a service providers perspective. We have arranged the book in this way so that providers are best equipped to meet the needs of their customers, whether they are patients, residents, or clients. We know that elderly people may experience dislocation in their care because of frictions and gaps between different sectors, disciplines, teams, and organizations. To achieve seamless care, there is a need for greater understanding and harmony of purpose and action across the care spectrum.

Towards Quality Care Caroline Mozley, Caroline Sutcliffe, Heather Bagley, Lis Cordingley, David Challis, Peter Huxley, Alistair Burns, 2017-11-22 This unique evaluation of the outcomes of residential and nursing home care for older people identifies the factors determining the quality of life of older people who have moved into care homes. It examines the relationship between older people's psychological well-being and the kinds of care received in residential homes. The volume draws on a study of UK care homes interviewing new entrants soon after admission and then on two further occasions to ascertain their experience of care and their quality of life. Interviews were also undertaken with care staff and their managers, and the care environment of each home was assessed. The authors provide valuable evidence of the factors which can influence older people's well-being on entering a care home and how they adjust, either positively or not, to their new surroundings. The volume offers clear pointers towards ways to improve quality of residential and nursing home care.

Measuring the Quality of Care for Older People Jonathan Potter, Andrew Georgiou, Michael Pearson, 2000 This book describes the agenda for quality measurement, looking at three quality of care case studies: stroke, fractured femur, and incontinence.

Quality of Life Improvement: Smart Approaches for the Working and Aging Populations Sabina Baraković, Zahid Akhtar, Jasmina Baraković Husic, 2024-03-19 Quality of life (QoL) is a broad concept that has many definitions and meanings depending on the context under consideration. It can be perceived as the overall enjoyment of life and a multidimensional concept which emphasizes the self-perceptions of an individual's current state of mind, which is affected in a complex way by the person's physical health, psychological state, personal beliefs, social relationships, and their relationship to salient features of their environment On the other hand demographic data suggests an increased need for workers worldwide and a rapid aging trend in the active workforce as well as in general This trend of workforce deficit and population aging will be even more prominent in the future Therefore in order to have and sustain a healthy motivated and productive workforce but also healthy independent and active elderly adults one must improve their QoL and vice versa Improving QoL will improve general public health and in turn create communities who can contribute in diverse and positive ways to both promote and sustain health for future generations Quality care for elderly people Edward J.
