

THE INSIDER GUIDE

Rome

The historic Colosseum.

STAY:

Grand Hotel de la Minerve

Swing open the guest room shutters and windows of this once 17th-century palatial mansion and your view is of the Pantheon, a colossal piece of living Roman history in the centre of the Eternal City. With an undoubtedly exceptional location, from where you can walk to most of the sights, this is an old school Grand Hotel. Expect a picnic to play in the classic atrium lobby while you sip a regional aperitif in the Le Capote bar. Yet don't expect a spa or gym; instead the hotel's standout feature is the Minerva Roof Garden. An all-season, all-weather restaurant and terrace that offers romantic, spell-binding views across the city. So allow lots of time for breakfast; you won't want to rush. Or linger over a sunset dinner.

Musei di Linghitherra

Found in the chic luxury shopping district of Via Borgognona, close to the Spanish Steps, this once was the aristocratic home of the Princes of Toltona and it retains a real sense of opulence and decadence. Now a boutique-style, historic hotel, (a Small Luxury Hotels of the World property), it is said to owe its name to its popularity with the English attracted to Rome by poet John Keats, who lived nearby. It has hosted royalty and stars, and many literary figures such as Mark Twain, and Ernest Hemingway. For modern day people watching take lunch on the terrace at the hotel's Café Romano; and order a few traditional Roman dishes like fried courgette flowers with ricotta (fiore di zucca).

SEE & DO:

Roma Eat Food Tour

My experience of Rome was truly enhanced with this private food tour. Created and offered by young archaeologists who work in the city, the half-day route takes visitors through an authentic Roman neighbourhood, visiting a market, tasting produce, and then on to different venues in the area, so you truly get to eat like a Roman - as well as learn a few fascinating secrets about the city, its extraordinary history, and architecture.

www.romeatfoodtours.com

Galleria Borghese

The cultural riches of Rome are remarkable and can be overwhelming for a first time visitor. The main sights, such as the Roman Forum, the Colosseum, and the breath-taking Vatican Museums are essential, yet if time allows try to get a ticket for the Borghese Museum and Gallery. Booking is required and possible online, and well worth it. The Borghese villa's golden park setting is beautiful, with its tall, Roman umbrella pine trees, and the collection of ancient and Renaissance art, including works by Canova and Bernini, is memorable.

Sunset View

As a city of seven hills, it shouldn't be too hard to enjoy a great view of the city at the end of a day exploring; yet for one of the best views try "Giardinale", on Janiculum Hill. It is not one of the seven, and it is out of the ancient city centre, but affords a wonderful perspective of the romantic domes and spires of Rome. If you want to stay in the centre, then try Pincian Hill, just above the Piazza del Popolo. Expect it to be crowded with fellow visitors and also with street vendors selling waffle-sticks, but even so it's a great view out towards the Vatican.

Travi Fountain

Rome has undergone some significant restoration; well it's an ongoing process and the central districts are looking better than ever. The huge baroque Travi Fountain is now finally free of scaffolding and it's looking pristine.

EAT:

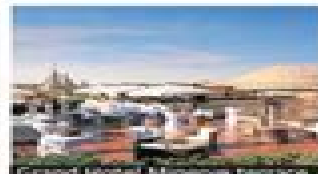

Armando del Pantheon

Chances are, if you are within a coin's throw of a historic marble fountain or a picturesque piazza, then to take a break from sightseeing and enjoy a drink or bite to eat is going to cost you dearly in central Rome - especially if you feel like sitting on a terrace where prices are inflated even more. However, if you walk just a few streets back from the main squares and sights then the chances are you will find interesting eating spots, like this family business, started in the 1940s by Armando Cagelli. Here you can enjoy a classic Roman menu - antipasti of bruschetta, primi piatti of pasta, and a second plate of trife (well, that's if you want to eat like a Roman). Either way, you have to try the antipasti...delicious.

www.armandodelpantheon.it

Saint Eustachio il Caffè

The Italians and their coffee - it's like the Brits and fish & chips. However, finding a local-only bar in central Rome is pretty much impossible these days, but some classic coffee places remain, like Grand Hotel Minerva terrace.

St. Peter's square.

Market courgette flowers.

The Trevi fountain.

Espresso macchina.

this one. Order at the bar unless you want to pay considerably more for your espresso macchine. Try also the "Latteria" coffee bar near the Vatican, at Borgo Pio 48 for an authentic experience.

www.santemastachiolocaffe.it

Panificio Mosca

So, you want pizza? Well, in Rome it's very different from Naples; here it's thin and crispy and the white pizzas are popular too. This gourmet bakery near the Vatican was on my food tour with "Roma Eat" and they served truly wonderful slices of Roman 'pizza al taglio' to go.

www.panificiomosca.it

Hedera

It's a travel cliché, but it's impossible to visit the Italian capital without enjoying an ice-cream. Yet for an authentic experience, avoid the brightly coloured, whipped-up products on sale on most street corners. Instead look out for a shop like this Hedera that sells traditional artisan gelato made from just milk, sugar and eggs. Hedera is said to be the Pope's favourite; after all it's only a few minutes' walk from the Vatican City.

BUY:

Mercato Monti

This weekend vintage-style market is a relatively new addition to the city scene, but provides a hip insight into modern Rome, with unique independent vendors and designers.

After breakfast try to find a moment to visit a neighbourhood food market; a great way to see some of the local produce and have the opportunity to buy aged Parmesan cheese at about a quarter of the price internationally.
