The Adolescent Criminal Ronald B. Flowers, 1990-01-01 Discusses the extent and characteristics of adolescent crime looks at theories concerning adolescent criminality and assesses the juvenile court system Saving Children from a Life of Crime : Early Risk Factors and Effective Interventions Institute of Criminology Cambridge University David P. Farrington Professor of Psychological Criminology, Department of Criminal Justice University of Massachusetts Brandon C. Welsh Assistant Professor, Lowell, 2006-10-25 After decades of rigorous study in the United States and across the Western world a great deal is known about the early risk factors for offending High impulsiveness low attainment criminal parents parental conflict and growing up in a deprived high crime neighborhood are among the most important factors There is also a growing body of high quality scientific evidence on the effectiveness of early prevention programs designed to prevent children from embarking on a life of crime Drawing on the latest evidence Saving Children from a Life of Crime is the first book to assess the early causes of offending and what works best to prevent it Preschool intellectual enrichment child skills training parent management training and home visiting programs are among the most effective early prevention programs Criminologists David Farrington and Brandon Welsh also outline a policy strategy early prevention that uses this current research knowledge and brings into sharper focus what America's national crime fighting priority ought to be At a time when unacceptable crime levels in America rising criminal justice costs and a punitive crime policy have spurred a growing interest in the early prevention of delinquency Farrington and Welsh here lay the groundwork for change with a comprehensive national prevention strategy to save children from a life of crime Male Criminal Activity from Childhood Through Youth Marc Le Blanc, Marcel Frechette, 2013-03-07 Male Criminal Activity From Childhood Through Youth reports the results of a large longitudinal study from 1972 to 1985 on a sample of delinquents and a comparison sample of the population in Montreal A clarification emerges from this extensive study how to describe criminal activity in a comprehensive theory of crime which integrates the offense offending and patterns of offending Using a developmental approach Drs Le Blanc and Frechette observed a gradation of crimes with subjects progressing through five distinct stages of offending In all the research investigates the factors that sustain the development of offending and the mechanisms which accelerate stabilize and decelerate the commission of crimes This book represents a significant advance in the understanding of the development of criminal activity The Development and Treatment of Childhood Aggression Kenneth H. Rubin, Debra J. Pepler, 2013-05-13 Comprised of papers and commentaries from the Earls court Symposium on Childhood Aggression held in Toronto Canada this volume reflects the Earls court Child and Family Centre's commitment to linking clinical practice to identifiable research based interventions which are known to be effective in the prevention and treatment of antisocial behavior in children The education of human services professionals has typically failed to train individuals to work with specific client populations providing a generalist approach grounded in theoretical assumptions and professional values rather than research and empirical studies This compelling book serves to fill this gap in professional education in the area of childhood aggression Representing substantial accomplishments in the advancement of an understanding of the plight of aggressive children and how best to ameliorate their often unpredictable and painful situations this text allows for cautious optimism that empirical research can have practical consequences for aggressive children and their prospects for a better life As such it is a truly important information resource for professionals in the fields of developmental psychology and counseling

Intergenerational Transmission of Criminal and Violent Behaviour Sytske Besemer, 2012 The apple doesn't fall far from the tree Like father like son Chip off the old block All these idioms seem to suggest that offspring resemble their parents and this also applies to criminal behaviour This dissertation investigates mechanisms that might explain why children with criminal parents have a higher risk of committing crime Several explanations for this intergenerational transmission have been contrasted such as social learning imitation of behaviour official bias against certain families and transmission of risk factors Sytske Besemer investigated this in England as well as in the Netherlands She answers questions such as does it matter when the parents committed crime in the child's life Do more persistent offenders transmit crime more than sporadic offenders Do violent offenders specifically transmit violent behaviour or general crime to their children Might the police and courts be biased against certain families Could a deprived environment explain why parents as well as children show criminal behaviour Does parental imprisonment pose an extra risk This dissertation is the first study to specifically investigate these mechanisms of intergenerational continuity The study is scientifically relevant because of its breadth integration of conviction data as well as data on self-reported offending and environmental risk factors its comparative design and the long periods over which transmission is investigated Furthermore the dissertation has important policy implications It demonstrates how penal policy designed to reduce criminal behaviour might actually increase this behaviour in the next generation This is especially important since Western countries such as the United Kingdom and the Netherlands show an increasing trend towards more punitive policies Sytske Besemer studied psychology and criminology at Leiden University and at the VU University Amsterdam before embarking on a PhD at the Institute of Criminology at the University of Cambridge UK She has recently been awarded a NWO Rubicon fellowship to conduct post doctoral research at UC Berkeley into intergenerational continuity of criminal behaviour family dynamics and the criminal justice system The Development of Antisocial Behavior and Crime Marc Le Blanc, 2021-09-16 This innovative and timely work explores how the developmental criminology paradigm can be applied to understandings beyond criminal careers to the development of more general antisocial behavior Importantly the rich data set from 50 years of cross sectional and longitudinal studies provides replication amongst samples genders generations and phases in the life span from cohorts born in the 1960s 1970s

1980s and 1990s This work also provides a rich history about the development of the Developmental Criminology paradigm drawing from developmental psychology and life course methodologies in Sociology With a 50 year multigenerational longitudinal dataset the Montreal Two Sample Four Generational Cross sectionnal and Longitudinal Studies MTSFGCLS the author explores the mechanisms of official and self reported antisocial behavior It provides insights into not only criminal behavior but other types of potentially problematic behavior including drug and alcohol use risky sexual behavior conflict with authority and other forms of antisocial behavior as well as their decline across the life course By examining the developmental mechanisms and trajectories of these behaviors the author proposes a multidisciplinary theory to explain these phenomenons This work will be of interested to researchers in Criminology Sociology and Psychology particularly within the growing area of Developmental and Life Course Criminology as well as related fields such as social work public health and public policy
