Parenting Beliefs, Behaviors, and Parent-Child Relations Kenneth H. Rubin, Ock Boon Chung, 2013-09-05 The purpose of this book is to present a rather simple argument Parents thoughts about childrearing and the ways in which they interact with children to achieve particular parenting or developmental goals are culturally determined Within any culture children are shaped by the physical and social settings within which they live culturally regulated customs and childrearing practices and culturally based belief systems The psychological meaning attributed to any given social behavior is in large part a function of the ecological niche within which it is produced Clearly it is the case that there are some cultural universals All parents want their children to be healthy and to feel secure However healthy and unhealthy at least in the psychological sense of the term can have different meanings from culture to culture

The Parental Experience in Midlife Carol D. Ryff, Marsha Mailick Seltzer, 1996 Most adults experience parenthood But the longest period of the parental experience when children grow into adolescence and young adulthood and parents themselves are not yet elderly is the least understood In this groundbreaking volume distinguished scholars from anthropology demography economics psychology social work and sociology explore the uncharted years of midlife parenthood The authors employ a rich array of theory and methods to address how the parental experience affects the health well being and development of individuals Collectively they look at the time when parents watch offspring grow into adulthood and begin to establish adult to adult relationships with their children With a strong emphasis on the diversity of midlife parenting including sociodemographic variations and specific parent or child characteristics such as single parenting or raising a child with a disability this volume presents for the first time the complex factors that influence the quality of the midlife parenting experience
