Convict Voices Anne Schwan, 2014-12-02 In this lively study of the development and transformation of voices of female offenders in nineteenth century England Anne Schwan analyzes a range of colorful sources including crime broadsides reform literature prisoners own writings about imprisonment and courtroom politics and conventional literary texts such as Adam Bede and The Moonstone Not only does Schwan demonstrate strategies for interpreting ambivalent and often contradictory texts she also provides a carefully historicized approach to the work of feminist recovery Crossing class lines genre boundaries and gender roles in the effort to trace prisoners authors and female communities imagined or real Schwan brings new insight to what it means to locate feminist or protofeminist details arguments and politics In this case she tracks the emergence of a contested and often contradictory feminist consciousness through the prism of nineteenth century penal debates The historical discussion is framed by reflections on contemporary debates about prisoner perspectives to illuminate continuities and differences Convict Voices offers a sophisticated approach to interpretive questions of gender genre and discourse in the representation of female convicts and their voices and viewpoints Exercising Discretion Loraine Gelsthorpe,Nicola Padfield,2012-12-06 The exercise of discretion in the criminal justice system and related agencies often plays a key part in decisions which are made but definitions of discretion are not clear and despite widespread recognition of its importance there is much controversy on its nature and legitimacy This book seeks to explore the importance of discretion to an understanding of the nature of the making of justice in theory and practice taking as its starting point the wide discretionary powers wielded by many of the key players in the criminal justice and related systems It focuses on the core elements and contexts of discretion looking at the power ability authority and duties of individuals officials and organisations to decide select or interpret vague standards requirements or statutory uncertainties Honouring Social Justice Margaret E. Beare,2008-01-01 These essays provide an illuminating introduction to the background of important social causes and describe dedicated examples of how to effectively champion calls for social justice Critical Perspectives in Forensic Care Tom Mason,Dave Mercer,1997-11-28 A full and challenging examination of the practice and contextual issues relating to nursing in secure units whether within special hospitals the prison service or more general hospitals Historical and philosophical issues are explored then more practical aspects are discussed Gender, Geography, and Punishment Judith Pallot,Laura Piacentini,Dominique Moran,2012-10-04 This book is the first of its kind that brings together human geography and the sociology of punishment to explore the relationship between distance and the punishment in contemporary Russia Using established penological and geographical theories the book presents in depth empirical research to show how the experiences of women prisoners are shaped by the distances that the Russian penal service sends prisoners to serve their sentences Its most eye catching feature is its use of interviews conducted by the authors and their research team with adult and juvenile women prisoners ex prisoners and prison officers in penal facilities in different regions of the Russian Federation between 2006 and 2010 It includes discussion of the impact of Russia s distinctive penal geography on prisoners family relationships how women prisoners sense of place and gender identities are shaped and re shaped on their journey from pre trial facility to correction colony to release and the social hierarchies relationships and practices that characterise Russia s penal institutions for women The authors are both experienced researchers in Russia The book brings together their complementary disciplinary expertise in the development of the concept of coerced mobilization to explore Russia s punishment culture The book argues that Russia s inherited geography of penalty combined with traditional ideas about women s role that shape the penal service s management of women prisoners add to their pains of imprisonment Crucially

the authors show how these factors are constraining the Russian penal service's ability to implement successive reforms aimed at humanizing Russia's notoriously tough prisons. Russian imprisonment as it relates to women is, they believe, an area of significant concern for lawmakers in that country as well as to human rights campaigners, geographers interested in space and power, and scholars studying the post-Soviet system.

Working with Offenders Gill McIvor, 1996. Contributors to this book review developments in social work practice, locating them in the context of changes in UK penal policy. David Smith examines the relationship between policy and practice in the Probation Service, illustrating how policy has often been preceded by practice initiatives from within the Service. George Mair argues that the past 10 years have been a period of unprecedented change, characterised by greater accountability and central control. Gill McIvor describes developments within social work departments in Scotland, particularly the introduction of full central government funding of statutory social work services and the development of associated national objectives and standards. Breidge Gadd describes the Northern Ireland Probation Board as characterized by its commitment to a range of community supervision programmes, by its customer-oriented service delivery, and by its links between probation officers and their communities. Anne Worrals reports on gender stereotyping of women by the courts; women are more likely to be referred for reports and more likely to be placed on probation. Duncan Lawrence illustrates how white probation officers' explanations of offending by black clients frequently differ from those offered by the clients themselves, and discusses how appropriate groupwork provision for black and other minority clients can be developed. Bryan Williams and Anne Creamer describe the increased use of prediction tools, despite the fact that aggregate measures are inaccurate in predicting individual behaviour. Mary Baker discusses the development of social work services for sex offenders and concludes that cognitive behavioural methods are more successful. George Mair describes and discusses the development of the intensive probation movements in England and the United States, and drawing on Home Office evaluations of UK projects, concludes that intensive probation has been generally successful. Hine and Thomas examine the extent to which Community Service orders have met the diverse aims proposed for them. Tony Martin reviews the development of reparation and mediation programs in various parts of the world and comments on the difficulties involved in evaluating them. Brian Williams looks at the growth of social work services in prisons, particularly anger management and sex offender programs, and comments on the uncertainty of future prison-based probation work. In the last chapter, Peter Raynor argues for the development of evaluative research methodologies which focus on the process of intervention and which draw upon a range of outcome measures.
